THIS BOOK IS DEDICATED TO AUNT SALLIE ESTES, a warm gracious Christian Southern lady, the matriarch of our Albert Monroe Estes Family Line; because she embraces all generations in her knowledge and love of her family members, Estes and Moore, past and present, and she shared this vast knowledge with all of us for this book; but mostly because she has shown great love and hospitality to this Northern niece all through the years, and is "Home" to me and my family in the Homeland of my Tennessee ancestors.

Acknowledgments

My first acknowledgments go to cousins May Folk Webb and Patrick Mann Estes, who dedicated many decades of their lives to researching and writing the original CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY, without which this book would never have come into being.

Thanks to my son, Richard, who encouraged me to research and write it and directed every step of the publishing, and to my husband, Dick, for the support and financial backing without which it could never have become a reality. I also want to thank my husband and my daughter, Sallie Estes, for putting up with my obsessive behavior these past five years. They both gave the book first place in my life.

Being a candidate for membership in the National Society of Colonial Dames in America, concurrently with writing this genealogy, I was able to uncover information that will benefit us all. I discovered that some of the generations given in the CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY showing our direct descent from the original Cary immigrant, Miles, were not thoroughly documented. Mrs. Albert O. Barrett, of Devon, Pa., a genealogist assigned to me by the Philadelphia branch of the Society, prodded me to go, in person, to the source, the Virginia State Library, in Richmond, and dig out the documents which give concrete proof of this lineage. These documents are included in the "History and Documents" segments of this book. Mrs. Barrett was a hard taskmaster, but I persevered and did find the documents after several trips. Because of her, this book is a more valuable and authentic research tool for others needing this documentation.

Librarians from the Huntingdon Valley, Pa.; Montgomery County, Norristown, Pa., branch; the Free Library of Philadelphia, Logan Square branch; Pennsylvania Historical Society, Philadelphia, Pa.; the Shipley School, Bryn Mawr, Pa.; the Philadelphia College of Art; and the Virginia State, Richmond, Va., Libraries must be acknowledged for their help in my research efforts. But one librarian stands out above all the others involved. She is Lia Hemphill, Head of the Reference Department of the Ludington Library of Bryn Mawr, Pa. From arranging an inter-library loan of a pristine copy of the CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY for our reprint, up to the last day of getting data for the CARY-ESTES-MOORE GENEALOGY bibliography, she was always courteous, willing to give of herself, with the added dimension of being very interested and enthusiastic about my research and the publications of the books.

The alumni associations of Yale University and the University of Alabama were also very cooperative. It seems miraculous to me that, from one name and address of a Snedecor alumnus from the latter university, the hundreds of cousins from the Judge Bedford Mitchell Estes branch of the family were able to be listed here.

Many family members sent supplementary materials and photographs, at times duplicating those sent by others. In the main body of the book I have acknowledged those whose items were received first. The following is a sampling of those, not credited elsewhere in the text, who sent substantial information on their family branches:

Albert Monroe (5) Estes Line: Mr. Russell G. Evans and Mr. and Mrs. Warner Moore Estes, of Ripley, Tenn.; and Mrs. James Roy Carson, and Mr. Albert E. Dykes, of Nashville, Tenn.

Mary Noel (7) Estes Line: Mr. Thomas E. Moody, IV, of San Antonio, Texas, and Mr. James Shelton Moody, of Plant City, Fla.

Elisha (3) Estes Line: Mrs. Samuel G. Slaughter, Jr., of Lynchburg, Va.

Patrick Mann (8) Estes Line: Mrs. Joseph P. Lawrence, of Nashville, Tenn.

(Carey) Estes Kefauver: Ms. Gail Estes Kefauver, of San Francisco, Calif.

Cary Family – Blair Line: Mr. P. Blair Lee, of Philadelphia, Pa.

Moore Family – Green Hill Line: Mrs. Bennett Gram, of Columbia, Pa.

But the most important acknowledgment of all is to the individual family members who took time from their busy lives to fill out the Ancestor and Descendant Charts I mailed to them. With the concerted effort of all, we should be able to have our book updated every five years, or whenever enough material has accumulated to warrant publication. Please keep the data coming and report immediately whenever births, marriages, and deaths occur in your families. And I'll also be happy to receive clippings about these events and also about outstanding achievements in your families for possible inclusion in the next "Activities and Accolades".

Thank you, everyone!

Foreword

There are many American families with the names Cary, Estes, and Moore. Numerous genealogy books have been written on all three. This book focuses on one branch of each family and traces them from the earliest known ancestors to the present generation.

All three families came to America in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. The Carys came from England; the Estes from Italy, by way of England; and the Moores from Scotland.

The earliest known record of the name Cary was in the "Doomsday Book", written in 1086 by edict of William the Conqueror. It lists the Manor of "Kari" in the Parish of St. Giles in the Heath, Devonshire, near Lancaster, closeby the border of Cornwall, and also a Somersetshire Manor named "Cari".

When the members of the Estes family use Cary as a given name, they almost invariably spell it "Carey." On page 14 of THE CARY FAMILY IN ENGLAND, the author, Henry G. Cary, of Boston, Mass. tells that his father added the "e" to the family name in 1820. Many American Carys adopted this new spelling.

The Estes family descends from the House of d'Este, dukes of Ferrara in Renaissance Italy. From Italy our progenitors emigrated to England, then to Wales, and from there to Virginia.

The Moore family name probably derived from the moors of Scotland, from which this family emigrated to Ireland and Wales during the reign of James I of England. The Celtic spelling is "More"; the Welsh spelling is "Mwr"; and the English is "Moore."

The Europe that our progenitors left behind was dominated politically by England and France, and spiritually by religion and science, or faith and reason, sometimes in uneasy truce, and sometimes in open war. It was the time of PILGRIM'S PROGRESS and of Newton, of Cromwell, Milton, Louis XIV, Racine, Corneille, Moliere, Dryden and Alexander Pope. We know that Miles Cary came to Windmill Point, Virginia from Bristol, England in the early 1640's, that Abraham Estes was in Virginia by 1704, and that Shields Moore landed in Maryland from Wales in 1732. There is no record of their having come as a result of religious persecution. The early Carys were members of the Church of England in colonial Virginia, one being a vestryman of Bruton

Church in Williamsburg, where his name may still be seen on the pew reserved for his family. The religious leanings of the early Estes are not documented and, although there are records of all their marriages, what churches they attended is not mentioned. On the other hand, many of the Moores, from the earliest days in America, have been prominent members and ministers of the Methodist Church.

Perhaps our immigrant ancestors, like so many others, came to make their fortunes. There was a strict law of primogeniture in Europe at that time – the eldest son inherited all the property. Not being the eldest sons in their families, they probably thought the New World, even with all its risks, offered more opportunity than the Old. In any case, they all became respected, landed gentlemen whose progeny married into the leading families of Virginia.

How many people were living in America and in the various colonies to which these ancestors immigrated? When Miles Cary arrived in America in the early 1640's, the population of Virginia was around 10,500 – a very small, select group, most of whom were of English stock. By 1704, when the earliest known Estes is recorded as being in Virginia, that colony's population was just over 53,000 – still relatively few. When Shields Moore landed in Maryland in 1725, the population of that colony was around 78,600. In 1690 there were only a quarter of a million people in all of the colonies; but by the time of the American Revolution, there was a population of over two and a half million. Up to 1680, nine-tenths of the colonists were of English stock.

Miles, the first Cary in America, owned and lived in many large homes in Virginia, some of which are still standing. He also owned large tracts of land. The two hundred acres in King and Queen County, Virginia, which Abraham Estes owned in 1704 pales in comparison with the holdings of Miles; yet Abraham's grandson, Benjamin, married a Thorp, granddaughter of William Triplett, close friend of George Washington, and Benjamin's grandson married Unity Fontaine, great-granddaughter of Patrick Henry. Shields Moore's descendants married into such prominent families as the Masons, the Yates, the Menefees and the Hills. His grandson, John, married a daughter of Green Hill, a landed gentleman, an officer in the Revolutionary War, and a founder of the Methodist Church in America. Green Hill's North Carolina home, "Moorland," is still extant, and is open to the public.

While this book traces three families, most of the material deals with the Estes family in America. The Estes section of THE CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY (C-E) followed the descendants of Elisha (3) and Benjamin (3), grandsons of Abraham (1) Estes of King and Queen County, Virginia, and sons of Abraham (2) Estes, Jr. But Abraham (1) had more than one son – in fact, he had nine children. In this book, we are dedicated to including descendants of as many of those children as can be found and documented. We want this genealogy and all future editions of it to be as comprehensive a record of the descendants of the original Abraham as is possible.

In this edition, we add descendants of the fifth child, Robert (2) and of the eighth, Elisha (2). Also, one line from the third child, Thomas (2), appears in "Estes Listings Appendix". Furthermore, we add descendants of Abraham (3) Estes, III, the first son of Abraham, Jr.

Like C-E, this book deals mostly with descendants of one son of Benjamin (3), Joel (4), whose marriage to Sarah Langhorne Bates connects us with the Carys of Virginia. This book updates those listings and also those of Abraham (2), Jr.'s fourth son, Elisha and those of Joel's brothers, Triplett (4) and Benjamin (4).

As for Sarah Langhorne Bates' Cary line, we endeavored to update all the lines from the CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY, and to include all documented descendants from the original ancestor, Miles. But we had success with only one line, the Blair family, descendants of Judith (8) Cary Bell's daughter, Judith Cary (9) Bell, who married Nathaniel Gist. In addition, an appendix to the Cary Listings provides partial information on lines from two other children of Miles, Miles, Jr. and Bridgett.

Joel (4) Estes' grandson Louis Powhatan (6) Estes married Eliza Mildred (5) Moore, connecting us with the Moore family. Many of Eliza's ancestors and descendants are included here.

We will continue to update this information and to gather additional information on other lines. In about five years, or whenever we have accumulated enough material to warrant publication, we will assemble another volume to supplement this one.

HOW TO TRACE YOUR ANCESTRAL LINE

First find your name in the index and turn to the page indicated. Under the paragraph about your parents, you will see your first name and the first names of all your siblings, in the order of your birth. Immediately below that paragraph, you are listed again, in greater detail. The number preceding your given name indicates the order of your birth. This number may be a small Roman numeral or an Arabic numeral. These two numbering systems are used for alternate generations to make it easier to immediately recognize differences of generation.

In any case, immediately before your family name is another number in parentheses indicating the generation, numbered from the earliest documented direct ancestor (Estes – Abraham; Cary – William of Bristol, England; Moore – Shields). Under the Estes family you will find listed basic facts regarding descendants of Abraham (2), Jr., Robert (2), Elisha (2) and Thomas (2), followed by a collection of biographies, obituaries, and news items about outstanding achievements and family gatherings. Then come family history, legends, and documents, such as birth, marriage and death certificates, wills, and land deeds – important for proving one's ancestry to join such patriotic organizations as the Daughters of the American Revolution. "Estes Family Connections" provides information on some of the families that have married into the Estes family, for example, the Tripletts of Virginia. (All of Benjamin (3) Estes' descendants are directly descended from those Tripletts). Much of the information regarding "connections" came from documents and family Bibles. It is recorded here to help others in their research into other family lines.

The Cary and Moore sections of this book each consist of listings of family members up to the present time, plus, in the case of Cary, family history and documents, and, in the case of Moore, family history and family connections.

Estes Listings

Abraham (1) Estes, who owned two hundred acres in King and Queen County, Virginia in 1704, and died Nov. 21, 1720, is our earliest direct ancestor of record. Every Estes listed in this book can trace himself/herself back to him.

The CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY (abbreviated here C-E) by May Folk Webb and Patrick Mann Estes, supplies a detailed account of the family from 1704 up to 1939. This book includes some new material that has been uncovered regarding our early ancestors, and then brings the family history up to 1980. In the case of ancestors about whom no new material was available, we include here just the name; the reader should consult C-E for further details. Where new material was found, even if only a date, we have carried over other data on that individual from C-E to provide a meaningful context.

Abraham (1) Estes married Barbara (last name unknown) and had nine children: Abraham, Jr., Samuel, Thomas, Richard, Robert, John, Moses, Elisha, and Barbara. In this book we shall be concerned with the descendants of only four of them: Abraham, Robert, Elisha, and Thomas. (There is a genealogy published in 1973 by Carl O. Estes of Storm Lake, Iowa, covering the line of descendants from Thomas that leads to Carl, ESTES BROTHERS – KENTUCKY TO IOWA).

Abraham (2) Estes was born about 1697 and died in Caroline County, Virginia in July 1759. The first child of his first marriage was Abraham (3).

ESTES LISTINGS APPENDIX

To the best of our knowledge the previous listings are thoroughly documented. The following line, back to the third child of Abraham (1) Estes and Barbara, Thomas (2) Estes, has not been completely proven. She has not yet been able to document the connection between fifth generation John Colman (5) Estes and sixth generation George Augusta (6) Estes. But the names of both these ancestors do appear in Barren and Metcalfe Co., Ky. Census rolls, as explained below:

Estes Activities & Accolades

The "activities and accolades" are items about the Estes family doings and doers. Many hundreds of relatives sent information about group events and individual interests, hobbies, and honors. This representative selection gives a flavor of what our family is like, gives an over-all view, and shows the variety and scope of their accomplishments and activities. They are arranged in the same order as the Estes listings.

TRIPLETT THORPE (4) ESTES DESCENDANTS

Henderson (7) Estes, a great-grandson of Col. Triplett (4) Estes, was a distinguished lawyer in Middletown, Ohio, who also served as an assistant district attorney of that state. An Ohio state publication gives his biography and tells something of his mother's family.

Henderson also receives accolades from his partner in law for over thirty years.

Louis (6) Estes, grandson of Triplett Thorpe, and his wife Zaretta Estelle Potter Estes, a couple loved and respect "by everyone in Decatur and Atlanta" are the subject of a letter from their granddaughter, Mary Zaretta (8) Brooks Garner.

HENDERSON (7) ESTES

Henderson Estes served as an assistant attorney general of Ohio in 1937 at "the Pleasure of the Attorney General", according to the OFFICIAL ROSTER, FEDERAL, STATE, COUNTY OFFICERS, 1937, compiled by William J. Kennedy, Secretary of State. The following is a biographical account from the Ohio Reference Library, 1937, pp. 604-605:

HENDERSON ESTES, Middletown attorney, is a descendant of several prominent and influential families of the South, and has made for himself a place of prestige and honor in the Ohio community where he has been established in his profession for twenty years.

Mr. Estes was born at Henderson, North Carolina, November 3, 1892, and is a son of William T. and Lucy (Henderson) Estes, both families having originally been in Bedford County, Virginia, and later went to Vance County, North Carolina. Mr. Estes' great-great-grandfather was Judge Leonard Henderson, who served for many years as chief justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court.* A cousin of Mrs. Lucy (Henderson) Estes was Hon. John S. Henderson, who for more than twenty years was United States congressman from North Carolina. She is a niece of the late Hon. A.M. Scales, a former governor of North Carolina, and a great-great-granddaughter of Nathaniel Macon, a man of great influence in North Carolina in the early history of the state. Mr. Estes' paternal great-grandfather was Capt. Triplet Estes, a soldier in the War of 1812. His paternal grandfather was a distinguished physician and surgeon in North Carolina, and in that state was born William T. Estes, who was educated there and made it his home until 1903, when he established the W.T. Estes Company, tobacco brokers, at Middletown, Ohio, moving in 1917 to Franklin, where he and Mrs. Estes still reside.

Excerpts from a letter, dated Nov. 21, 1977, from Henderson Estes' law partner and friend, C.H. Taylor, of Hendersonville, N.C.:

Dear Mrs. Seltzer:

Your card to H.O. Finkleman, Attorney at Law, Middletown, Ohio, has been forwarded to me for attention. I could write a book about this "Southern Gentleman" if I had the time, though it is amazing how one's memory fades in his declining years.

I met "Hen", as he was best known at Middletown, Ohio, in 1933. He was City Attorney at that time and a graduate of Washington and Lee Law School. I am also an attorney and at that time was looking for a connection to enter the practice of law. Hen and I opened a law office in the First National Bank in 1934 and remained together for about thirty-six years and until his death. Hen was born in Henderson, N.C. I knew his parents. His mother was a genuine Southern Lady. His father was in the tobacco business. . . .

Hen was married to a "court reporter" whose name I can't recall. . . . One son was born to them, whose first name I can't recall. They were divorced shortly after the son was born. . . . Hen remarried and no children were born to them. Her name was Marge Jones. . . .

Hen was called by friends "The Southern Gentleman." He was Assistant Attorney General of Ohio for two years, about 1938-40, though I can't recall the exact dates. He was Chairman of the Butler County, Ohio Democratic Party for many years. He was a strong Democrat and a good lawyer. . . .

Hen was an excellent public speaker and a good friend of mine. We were associated together all those years and there was never an argument of any kind about anything. . . .

Yours truly,

(Signed) C.H. Taylor

LOUIS (6) ESTES & ZARETTA ESTELLE POTTER ESTES

Zaretta Louise (7) Estes, daughter of Louis (6) Estes, married Eugene A. Brooks. Her daughter, Mary Zaretta (8) Brooks Garner, of Atlanta, Ga., supplied this information:

LOUIS (6) ESTES and ZARETTA ESTELLE POTTER

He [Louis (6) Estes] was a fine gentleman and I knew him well. He lived to be 91 and was loved and respected by everyone in Decatur and Atlanta. I lived with him for over a year during the war when my husband was overseas and I knew his gentle and kind ways. He was self-made and did well in the surgical supply business and was independent his life through. He was particularly close to my mother, Zaretta, since she was the daughter who was always near.

... his mother and father died very young... [their children] were adopted by different people and were separated all their lives. They really saw very little of each other. "Papa", as we called my grandfather, was adopted by a Mr. Bradine who was a land grader and helped to build the railroad from Cornelia Ga. to Franklin, N.C. and moved to Athens, Ga. He worked [Louis Estes] in a drug store there and thus became interested in drugs and surgical supplies. He moved to Atlanta with the Bradines and lived on property as a young man that I now play golf on. His brother, Joe, had a dancing school in Atlanta and that is where he met my grandmother who was visiting her aunt in Atlanta. They had a happy life together. She [Zaretta] loved to travel and wore beautiful hats and was considered very beautiful. He loved to go fishing and spent much time in Florida -- many winters.

ALBERT MONROE (5) ESTES DESCENDANTS

Patrick Mann (8) Parker was a dearly loved and highly respected citizen of Orysa, Tenn. His obituary gives a glimpse of this man, whose jovial presence seemed to light up any place he entered.

An Estes Family Reunion at Reelfoot Lake, Tenn., in August, 1977, was a very memorable event for all who came. Sallie (7) Estes, of Orysa, Tenn., arranged the entire affair. The setting was a lake formed when the Mississippi flowed backwards in 1819. Many of the cousins who came had never met before. The ones who came the greatest distance were the Gerald Leitzes family from Irvington-on-Hudson, N.Y. Included in "Activities and Accolades" is a list of all the Albert Monroe Estes family in attendance at that Reunion. At this event, the late Myra Bacon Rice (Mrs. Ralph Estes (7) Rice), of Dyersburg, Tenn., and Miss Alice (8) Rice, of Orysa, Tenn. supplied us with valuable information on the Moreau Pinckney (5) Estes branch of the family.

Items covering the Louis Powhatan (6) branch tell about "Sallie Estes Day" held in 1968. A gracious Southern lady, to whom this book is dedicated, Sallie (7) Estes was honored at her church for 50 years of service and leadership, particularly among the young people. We also include here her recipe for a typically Southern dish enjoyed by the Estes family in Orysa, Tenn. It was "adopted" from the British during colonial times and, like the Estes, came to Tennessee by way of Virginia. There is a legend which tells how this good, hot, slightly sweet bread, "Sally Lunn" got its name.

A sampling of the activities and accolades of the Philadelphia branch of the Estes family (descendants of Smith William (7) Estes) includes an account of their first Christmas Family Reunion, in 1979.

Smith's eldest daughter, Lillian Estes (8) Moyer supplied a favorite "Northern" recipe. She is the matriarch of this branch and a superb cook. There follow two newspaper clippings about her grandson, David (10) Knittel, who at the age of 12 performed a brave life-saving act.

In the area of crafts and hobbies, George (9) Meyers, son of Agnes (8) Estes Meyers, has a houseful of trophies for designing and flying model airplanes ranging from small non-powered to huge highly intricate ones, motorized, and controlled from the ground.

The youngest child of Agnes (8) Estes Meyers, David John (9) Meyers, met with a tragic end as a result of a motorcycle-truck collision at age 19. He is eulogized in a poem.

Helen (8) Estes Seltzer's husband and son, Richard Sr. and Jr., have had interesting and varied lives. Richard Sr. has served as a college dean and a school superintendent, is a retired colonel in the USAR, and is involved in such activities as acting in little theatre, playing his violin in community orchestras, and painting. Richard, Jr. has written children's stories, plays, and an historical novel.

Smith William (7) Estes' brother, Laurence Bradford (7) Estes, stayed in Tennessee and farmed the family land. He was a steward of St. Paul's Church, near Ripley, where he served as a Sunday School Superintendent for 26 years. He was also active in the Farm Bureau. In letters, his son, Laurence Bradford (8) Estes, Jr., of Memphis, Tenn., gives some further biographical details, and a nephew, Albert Estes (8) Dykes, of Nashville, Tenn., praises his kindness to his tenant farmers during the Depression.

James Warner Moore (8) Estes and his wife now live in Coral Gables, Fla. Both are teaching and studying for Ph.D.'s at the University of Miami. They have distinguished themselves in the music field, as evidenced by highlights of their accomplishments given in program notes from one of their concerts.

William Lawrence (6) Estes migrated from Tennessee to Bethlehem, Pa. He and his son, William Lawrence, Jr., became world-famous surgeons. The father's account of his early life, written for his children, provides a vivid, detailed description of life on the plantation of our ancestor, Albert Monroe (5) Estes, in Haywood Co., Tenn., in the Civil War period.

PATRICK MANN (8) PARKER, SR.

Excerpts from the Obituary of Patrick Parker, Sr. from THE LAUDERDALE COUNTY ENTERPRISE, Ripley, Tenn. May 13, 1977:

Born in Haywood County, he moved to Durhamville-Orysa at the age of 15. He was active in founding and carrying on the Durhamville-Orysa Community Improvement Club and led many of its most successful projects, including its self-improvement courses and its push for better rural telephone service. During World War II, he served on the county committee of the Agricultural Stabilization Conservation Service. Many children knew him as "the chewing gum man," since he often handed out sticks to them.

SALLIE (7) ESTES

THE STATES GRAPHIC, a newspaper of Brownsville, Tenn., Friday, July 12, 1968, issue, provides some biographical data on Sallie Estes (Mrs. Albert Monroe (7) Estes, Jr., reporting on "Sallie Estes Day."

SALLIE (SALLY) ESTES Durhamville-Orysa News by Mrs. Warner Estes. . . Sunday, July 7, was "Sally Estes" day at St. Paul's Methodist Church. It was a complete surprise when during the morning service it was announced by Roy Thompson, "This Is Your Life, Miss Sally." Ricky Pennington, MYF president pinned a beautiful orchid corsage on her shoulder. Many of Miss Sally's students during her 50 years as Sunday School teacher and MYF leader were there to wish her many happy years to come and especially to thank her for her wonderful years of help, encouragement and love, she had given each of her "children".

Mr. Pinkney Meacham of Ripley, Mrs. Richard Workman, Memphis, Mrs. Orvil Wintermute, Durham, N.C., Frank Thompson, Murray, Ky., Pat Parker, Jr., took part in the program. A lovely, engraved silver casserole was presented Miss Sally by Mrs. Lewis Kirkpatrick, president of the Guild. Letters and telegrams sent by former students were read and presented to the honoree. Everyone in the community is indebted to the Guild for providing such a lovely tribute to a great lady. Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Hilliard Crews, Memphis, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Bryan, Cordova, Mr. and Mrs. MacWilliams, LeGrande Harvey, Brownsville, Miss Linda Hughes, Moscow, the Rev. King Dickerson and son, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thompson, Murray, Ky., Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Thompson, Union City, Mr. and Mrs. John Shires of Jackson, Mrs. Richard Workman, Memphis, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Lea, Brownsville, Mr. and Mrs. Billy Martin, Memphis, Mrs. E.L. Johnson, Memphis, Mrs. Charles Moore and Sonja, Ripley, the David McDonalds, Memphis, the Howell Jordons, Read and William of Henning. . . .

RISEN SALLY LUNN (from Virginia)

Sallie (7) Estes supplied this favorite recipe of the Estes family in Orysa, Tenn. We first tasted it at a dinner in "Oaklawn", the Estes family homestead where it had been prepared by Lidy Kate King Estes (Mrs. Laurence Bradford (7) Estes, Sr.):

3 whole eggs

½ cup sugar

½ cup butter (creamed)
2 cups milk (lukewarm)
1 envelope yeast
5 cups flour (about - more or less)
1 teaspoon salt

Dissolve yeast in ¼ cup warm water. Cream sugar and butter together. Add beaten eggs. Add warm milk then add sifted flour with salt. Batter should be the consistency of cake batter.

Beat well. Pour in large stem cake pan. Cover and let rise in warm place until about doubled in size.

Bake at once in preheated oven (350 degrees) until done - about 45-60 mins. Serve hot with melted butter or gravy.

The Nashville TENNESSEAN, Sunday, Jan. 16, 1977, in an article about the Sally Lunn recipe, gives this explanation of Who Was Sally Lunn?

Mary Lyles Wilson Miller, a cookbook author and famous cook herself, had an answer. She said Sally Lunn was an English peasant girl of many generations ago. She made and sold hot bread on the streets of London - and the good, hot, slightly sweet bread finally was known by her name - Sally Lunn.

On Sunday, Dec. 30, 1979, many members of the Smith William Estes family gathered at "Barn Hill", home of Dick and Helen (8) Estes Seltzer, in Huntingdon Valley, PA. LILY ESTES (8) MOYER

In the Philadelphia branch of the Estes family, Lily, (Mrs. William Norris Moyer, Sr.) is famous for her culinary skills -- especially her desserts -- always made from "scratch". Here is a family favorite:

DUTCH CHOCOLATE CAKE

1½ c. granulated sugar	1 c. sour milk
2/3 c. butter	1 tsp. soda - dissolved in milk
5 eggs separated	3 c. flour
5 heaping tsp. cocoa	1 tsp. baking powder dissolved in ½ c. boiling water	1 tsp. vanilla
	pinch of salt

Cream sugar and butter together. Add egg yolks and mix well. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Add dry ingredients alternately with sour milk and soda. Add cocoa-water mixture and mix well. Add vanilla. Fold in beaten egg whites. Pour in prepared pans and bake in moderate oven 375 degrees 40-45 minutes.

DAVID JOHN (10) KNITTEL

On May 22, 1975, when in the sixth grade at Levering School, David received the "Annual Merit Award for Outstanding Excellence in Service" from the Philadelphia Home and School Council. This was in recognition of an act of heroism performed by David, as described in a May, 1977 article in the ROXBOROUGH REVIEW, Phila., Pa.:

During the winter of 1975, on his way home from school, at lunchtime, a pupil slipped on the ice and was impaled on a fence with a spike in his neck. David ran to the injured student's aid. He lifted him off the fence, laid him down and ran for help. The school coordinator came and called a nearby policeman who quickly took the child to the hospital where he was treated and able to be released in a few hours because he received quick attention.

GEORGE JOHN (9) MEYERS, III

Excerpts from a BUCKS COUNTY COURIER TIMES, Levittown, Pa., article of Thursday, Aug. 11, 1977:

"I really got into it because I've always had the ambition to fly real airplanes but I never managed to get my license. At least this way, though, even if I don't get to fly, my models do," he says.

Meyers. . . spends an average of two hours per night working on his hobby, but for his trouble, has captured 90 trophies, mostly for first prize finishes, in flying his models.

Meyers explained that there are three area groups really devoted to model airplane flying. And he belongs to all three.

The first group, dubbed "SOTS", for Scale Old Times Society, is made up of 20 model airplane buffs whose forte is the scale or "peanut" model. These. . . average 10 by 12 inches. . . "We make them by hand out of balsa wood and tissue. It usually takes about two weeks' worth of spare time to build one."

Another group, of which Meyers is president, is the "Flying Bucks," a general interest group of model flyers, who use both gasoline powered engines and fishing-line-pullstrings to fly them. . . .

The third group is the Washington's Crossing Free-Flight Group. The airplanes this group flies usually average a wing span of 36 inches and are strictly gas-powered planes.

"You could say that this is the most intricate type of model flying. We build about 90 percent of each plane right from scratch. And we insure them in case one should go out of control or crash.

Meyers has helped instruct model airplane classes at the Hatboro YMCA and has taken airplane demonstrations to area orphanages.

And he's already started prepping son, Gregory, (4 yrs. old) for an interest in model-flying, and Gregory's very receptive.

"He only came in seventh," the elder Meyers reminisces, "but the winner was 12 years old -- now that's a big age difference. But we'll make a winner out of him yet."

Like father, like son. Little Gregory is already saying, "I'd rather be flying."

DAVID GEORGE JOHN (9) MEYERS

GOLIATH & DAVID

In Memoriam -- David George John Meyers,

b. April 6, 1955, d. July 6, 1975.

The truck and driver were Goliath;

David's cycle his slingshot.

Face to face

They rounded the corner,

Motors blaring.

The millenium was different

So were the odds:

This was the machine age.

Born of parents nearing forty:

David,

A perfect physical-emotional culmination:

Ever sweet and docile,

Eyes smiling,

A bold, yet shy, grin

Crinkling his noble countenance.

He got his own head,

'Twas natural.

All melted 'neath the charm,

Carefully wielded for two decades

On the anvils of handsomeness

And diplomacy.

This David towered --

Unlike his Bible counterpart . . .

A full two inch above six.

Another fraction'd tipped

His perfect image.

The height of the driver?

No matter.

Civilization ruled out

God's own criteria for battles.

LAURENCE BRADFORD (7) ESTES, SR.

Laurence Bradford (8) Estes, Jr. provided these biographical details:

Dad was a farmer all of his life. He was a merchant (general merchandise) from 1922 until 1944. He served on the Haywood County (Brownsville, Tenn.) School Board for more than twenty years. . . . Dad was very active in church and was always a judge or clerk in elections but never ran for any state or county office.

The following comments about Laurence Bradford Estes, Sr., come from a letter by Albert Estes (8) Dykes, of Nashville, Tenn., written in reference to the 1977 Estes Family Reunion at Reelfoot Lake, Tenn., Aug. 1977:

Incidentally, we'll be within a few miles of Henning, Arthur [Alex] Haley's home. Maybe we could enlist his research abilities? Another Kunta Kinte... The TV [Roots] was quite interesting to us as to the slavery episodes, but the brutalities shown certainly did not show the compassion and kindnesses the plantation owners showed towards the slaves. I know our ancestors in West Tennessee treated theirs well. I personally witnessed how Uncle Lawrence Estes carried many of the "sharecroppers" through lean years when crops failed, without even money for necessities. This period, of course, was in the 1920's, far from the slavery days but still indicative of former years.

WILLIAM LAWRENCE (6) ESTES, SR.

Edward Wynne (7) Estes, of Virginia Beach, Va., gave permission to include here the early life segment of the book DR. WILLIAM L. ESTES, 1855-1940, AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY, written by his father, a distinguished surgeon, and published in 1967, by his brother Dr. William Lawrence (7), Jr., in conjunction with St. Luke's Hospital, Bethlehem, Pa. Dr. Estes describes in detail the operation of and life on the plantation of his father, Albert Monroe (6) Estes, in Haywood County, Tenn. This was the same land that was owned by the original pioneer from from Virginia to Tennessee, his grandfather, Captain Joel Estes.

I was born November the 28th 1855. My father, Albert Monroe Estes, had been married twice before and my mother once before they were united. My mother was the daughter of Dr. William Owen of Henrico County, Virginia. Her mother was a Burton -- Margaret Burton, also of Virginia. My mother's maiden name was Marcia Burton Owen.

My father had five children from the first marriage and one from the second. My mother had two children, both daughters, from her first marriage. I was the only product of this last marriage. It is evident, therefore, that I was born into a large family.

At the time of my birth the children of my father's first marriage were all grown up, my mother's daughters were adolescent. They were attending school away from home. All other children were living at home. The son of my father's second marriage was still a youth. Hence my infantile self was thrust into a big family of grown up children... and my advent was a source of rejoicing to my mother's daughters, the older of whom, Sister Sue, as soon as she returned from school, took upon herself the privilege of my early education and no doubt much of my physical care.

... My half-brother, Lewis [Louis Powhatan (6) Estes] the next youngest to me, acted as a sort of mentor and took some real interest in my welfare as soon as I was old enough to go about...

My mother's oldest daughter was destined to be very closely associated with me for many years. The second daughter died early in adult life.

I was born on my father's largest plantation - I think there were three or four plantations altogether. This homestead was located near the western border of Haywood County, Tennessee, about twelve miles from Brownsville, the county seat. There was another town or village about five miles away located westward in the adjoining county, Lauderdale. There were no other towns or villages within forty miles.

My father's homestead adjoined that of his brother Moreau, who migrated with him many years before from Virginia. These two brothers came from Bedford County, Virginia. (See Estes Genealogy). They settled about three miles from big Hatchie River on the highest land east of the river, just on the edge of the rich alluvial soil of the "river bottom", as it was called in the South. This part of West Tennessee was at the time very thinly settled. It was a little over fifty miles east of Memphis.

Our nearest neighbors, also planters, lived at least five miles distant from my father's and uncle's homesteads. The dirt roads were not well constructed and there were many creeks, few of which were bridged, so that social intercourse except between the two families, depended very largely on the season and weather conditions. Of a necessity, horseback transportation was the only possible all-year-round mode of getting about though my father owned a big carriage and two or three buggies and several farm wagons which members of the family never used. The carriage was exactly patterned after that of George Washington, which may be seen at Mt. Vernon to this day. A closed vehicle swung on springs which gave it a twofold motion, forward and backwards and to either side. It was drawn by two horses. On the road its motions accurately imitated those of a small steamer at sea; it pitched and it rolled. It was the terror of my childhood as I usually became seasick and felt nearly smothered in its interior.

My father and uncle were regarded as (and actually were) the richest planters of their region. How many acres of land my father owned I do not know but it must have been several thousand. He had, as far as I can recall, about one hundred and fifty negro slaves on the home Plantation. There was one white overseer on this farm and other white employees to manage and run the grist mill. I cannot recall that any of the grown children did any work or had any set duties to perform. The young ladies sewed or embroidered for themselves. My father and mother, however, worked hard. My father, besides holding the office of captain of militia, was one of the leading citizens and had much of the responsibility of the community, while at the same time he kept oversight and control of the plantations and mill.

My mother had direct control of the domestic affairs and the supervision of the health and sanitation of the slaves. This also included food, clothing and listing of supplies both for the family and slaves. This was a big job and a very responsible one. Also, she rendered first aid for injured slaves. I can very distinctly recall one case of a big buck negro who was kicked by an ox - a large slice of skin was torn upwards on one of his thighs. Very promptly he brought his injury to my mother for first treatment before the doctor arrived. The family physician lived at least five miles away and he had several plantations under his care. Naturally it always required some time for the doctor to respond to a call and as he might be at another Plantation further away it might be several hours before he could be reached and brought to the farm.

My father's home plantation was the best organized and equipped of any in the region. The slaves were organized into distinct squads with specific duties. There were cooks (always women) with a head cook, laundry maids, house maids, dairy maids, sewing maids (who I think were recruited from the house-maid ranks) carders and spinners and weavers. Most or much of the cloth for clothing the slaves wore was made on the farm. This meant preparation of the raw material as well as weaving the cloth and sewing the clothes. The only machinery used were cards, manipulated by hand, for separating and preparing the cotton and wool for spinning, spinning wheels and looms. One may wonder that I mentioned wool to be made into fabrics. My father bred a herd of sheep which supplied wool for clothing as well as mutton for the table. Of course there was always cotton in abundance.

There were hostlers, coachmen, carpenters, blacksmiths and field hands. Field hands were divided into plowers, hoers, teamsters and general utility hands. Both men and women worked in the fields. Over these a negro foreman functioned. He was considered a cruel taskmaster and required constant oversight. Over all the plantation activities was an overseer or manager - a white man from New England. Besides, there was an organization to manage and run the mill, which was both a grist and saw mill and was powered by steam. There was a white man who superintended the mill.

There were a number of saddle horses used only for riding, carriage horses or harness horses, and a large number of mules to do field and hauling work.

The homestead consisted of a frame central building, two stories high, with wings on either side, and a rear extension. There were large white pillars in front which supported the roof of a porch. A whitewashed picket fence was located perhaps a little less than one hundred feet in front of the house, arranged in an oval and extending on either side of the house to the rear, expanding as it went backward and enclosing the slave nursery on the north, the kitchen and laundry and work rooms in the rear. Another picket fence running straight north and south in the rear separated a large kitchen garden from this oval enclosure and about one hundred and fifty feet further in the rear and back of this was a large orchard of apple, peach, pear and plum trees.

The orchard had almost every variety of fruit tree the region and climate would grow. I recall that the peaches were of many varieties and were luscious fruit. There were also grape vines arranged in large overhead arbors.

A gate in the center of the oval front fence let into a lawn or front yard. A brick paved walk led directly from this gate to the front porch.

Posts and hitching racks for horses were located outside this front fence to the right as one approached the house. To the left a road led to the huge stables, which were surrounded by an enclosed yard or corral. At the rear of this corral was a large pond for watering the stock. The stables and corral were several hundred yards from the house. I cannot recall that there ever was any odor of the stables in the vicinity of the house.

A road led down from the hitching post area through a well-wooded park to the big front gate which formed the only entrance to the homestead. This big gate was almost a mile from the house.

To the right of the house in a separate division were the negro cabins, built in a long row, each, separate one-room cabins. They were made of logs with a chimney and fireplace and had a street in front. This negro village was about a quarter of a mile from the house. I do not remember how many cabins there were but as each couple married they were given a separate cabin. Unmarried men were located farthest away and occupied cabins somewhat separate from the others. As the negroes were encouraged to marry early there were few adult bachelors. The unmarried maid servants had quarters at the other end of the row of cabins nearest the house and beyond these was the nursery or nurseries for the negro babies. Old women who had much experience had charge of these nurseries which were almost on a level with the homestead and a little in front of what would be the line of the cabins.

Located perhaps two hundred feet from the homestead was a storehouse, one end of which was a large room called the smokehouse. Here meats - chiefly pork - were cured. The other room was a general storeroom for various supplies.

A gate in the rear fence led to the path which ended at the gin where the cotton was ginned and baled. This was about a half mile away, located toward the north. It was run by mule power. The gin was elevated on wooden pillars with a large platform on boards in front. This platform served as a favorite playground for all the children - me and the blacks. I have reason to remember this platform for I fell off it one day (it was perhaps six or eight feet high), my forehead came in contact with a sharp edge of one of the boards, and a long gash was cut in my forehead. I was soon rescued and carried, no doubt yelling lustily, to my mother, bleeding so profusely that she was very badly frightened. This time the doctor was hastily summoned and came as fast as his horse would carry him.

There was a blacksmith shop and a cooperage. It is evident, therefore, the homestead was prepared to do all the necessary repairs and the construction work for wagons and harness, as well as horseshoeing, and the manufacture of brooms, and a large number of baskets to receive and hold cotton and other products of the plantation.

While cotton was the major crop, a profusion of vegetables of many kinds was produced, as well as wheat, oats, potatoes, etc., and a large quantity of beef, mutton, poultry and turkeys. The region was full of game and there were no restrictions of game laws and hunting seasons.

The gristmill supplied flour and meal. The sawmill produced lumber and wood for fire. The mills supplied not merely enough lumber for the needs of the plantation as well as flour, meal and feed for the stock, but also lumber and flour and feed for the neighboring farms of the region, from which considerable income was received.

The family lived well and the negroes were well supplied with food and clothing. The young children were under the care of the old women and were housed during the day in special quarters and these old women were directed especially to see that proper food was supplied to the children and that they were regularly fed. My recollection is that there were very few instances of poor health and poor development. Children who were backward, particularly physical development, received special care - outdoor life and what we know now as physiotherapy. I recall a case of a girl baby who did not learn to walk until after the average age period. A special apparatus was made to furnish support, fastened under the upper extremities, and the child's lower extremities were left extended so that the feet came down to the ground. This support was attached to the end of a long beam and with the child suspended, the beam was rotated in a circle.

Thus the child was taught to step in the position of walking until finally it could take steps independently and bear the weight of its body. I presume this child had a mild case of rickets which soon, by careful feeding and outdoor life, recovered, and the child developed well and finally became a normal girl.

There were maids assigned to and specially trained for ladies' maids. These served in the house. Then there were young boys and young male slaves assigned to be servants to the young men. These took care of boots and shoes and clothing and acted as hostlers and attendants for them.

As soon as I was born, or at least as early as I can remember, a middle-aged Negro woman, strong and healthy, who had young children, was designated as my nurse, I think wet nurse as well as my constant attendant. She became my "Mammy". We became devoted to one another. As soon as I was old enough to go about independently it became my custom to breakfast with my mammy every Sunday morning. I would appear at her cabin early and she always had a breakfast prepared of things she knew I liked and she alone ate with me. When I was five or six years old, her youngest son, a boy a few years older than I, was appointed as my playmate and also to see to it that nothing happened to me and that I not be allowed to stray far from the house. While this boy was what some called my "whipping boy" - he was supposed to receive a whipping if any accident happened to me - I think that I received more whippings than the negro boy did. This boy was to be my special slave to care for and aid me in every way the balance of our lives.

Now as to whipping the slaves, I daresay the field hands were whipped now and then, although I did not see any of the punishment. The general overseer of the plantation was a New Englander and was said to be rather quick to punish the negroes and my father had to watch carefully, I was told, to prevent cruelty and unnecessary punishment. As a matter of fact, I can recall but one whipping. As I was very sensitive to what happened to the house servants and my mother was equally distressed by unkindness to them, I feel sure that whipping must have been a rare occurrence. The fact that the negroes who had been in the family for a long time were devoted to my mother and myself and remained with us long after they were free, is proof they were not cruelly used nor whipped.

A typical day on the homestead was as follows: The field hands, hostlers, etc. arose at daybreak. The women immediately began the preparation of breakfast. Each family ate in its own cabin and the women of the family did the cooking. The men cut firewood, fed the horses and mules, then ate their breakfast. Then they got their teams, plows, or other necessary tools and left for the fields or wherever they were directed to work for the day. Young children were taken to the nursery and left in charge of the old women. If there was a nursing mother amongst the field hands she was made to return at the proper intervals to nurse her baby.

Milkmaids went out to an open shed to which the cows were called or driven. They milked the cows and carried the milk to the cooling room where it was placed in freshly drawn water from the well or in a subterranean cool room:

we rarely had ice. The milk was strained and stored or placed in earthen jars to thicken and afterwards to be churned into butter. These maids then went to some other labor - such as spinning and weaving.

The skilled laborers - blacksmiths, carpenters, coachmen and millers - breakfasted and went to their respective places of labor. At sunup the men about the house made fires, if it were cold enough to require them, brought water for the gentlemen and the housemaids did similar offices for the young ladies. The cooks set about preparing breakfast. The kitchen was an entirely detached building located in the rear of the residence between it and the garden fence. This breakfast before the war on a well-ordered and well-to-do plantation was no light affair. A profusion of fruit in season, several kinds of hot bread freshly cooked, fried chicken or some game or sausage, spare ribs, pigs feet or pigs brain or liver, hot cakes, golden syrup or honey, coffee or milk - not tea. After breakfast the maids cleared the table, "did" the bedrooms and then settled to sewing or embroidering. My mother gave out all necessary supplies of all kinds for the day, inspected the negro quarters and overlooked the garden and directed cultivation of flowers.

The young people of the family went hunting, fishing or visiting or took horseback excursions. The family dined about 2 p.m. (a big meal) and had supper, the lightest meal of the day, usually "after dark". I do not recall exactly how the field hands were fed at noon. My impression is, if they were working some distance from their cabins, food was sent out to them in great baskets. At all events the field hands did not cook their own dinner on weekdays.

At sundown the hands returned from the fields and work houses, had supper in their own cabins after caring for the mules and horses. Then they had an hour or so for visiting and gossiping amongst themselves and so to bed.

Saturday nights and Sundays were the great days for the slaves. Then they gathered for singing, horseplay or going to church.

Of course, there were no bathrooms in those days. Our water supply came from a big deep well. The water was brought to the surface by a rope, bucket, and windlass. To supply water from this well, several hundred yards from the house, necessitated carrying in large wooden buckets and was considerable labor, which was done by the houseboys or housemaids. The favorite way of carrying these buckets was on their heads and balanced so that it was not necessary to touch or hold them with the hands.

When the Civil War began May 1861, I was a little over five years of age. I still have a vivid recollection of the excitement, unrest and hubbub on the plantation. My two grown up half-brothers immediately volunteered and left for training in the army. The oldest one went into the cavalry and became a noted sharpshooter. I think the younger one went into the infantry. They were both in the armies operating in Tennessee and Mississippi chiefly.

My father carried on the work of the farms as well as the conditions of the times permitted.

Situated as it was, away from any highway and outside the zone of active regular warfare, we were spared a great deal of the immediate hardship and distress of the area of large army operations and battles. But we were constantly exposed to raids, of irregular troops of both armies ("bushwhackers").

The plantation gradually went to pieces from attrition and thievery of these marauders. Our best horses were stolen first, then the mules went. Cattle and hogs were stolen and towards the end, some of the negroes who had come to the plantation by purchase a little before the war, deserted, usually taking a riding animal with them. Not one of the old servants, especially not one of those employed about the house in close service on the family, deserted.

Many acts of vandalism occurred. One of these was the destruction by fire of one whole year's cotton crop. This was done by a band of irregular troops. I think, too, this band claimed to belong to the South and it claimed it was ordered to burn the cotton in order to prevent its falling into the hands of Northern troops which were operating in West Tennessee.

One hundred and twenty-five bales of cotton of the best quality were burned. At this time cotton was selling for one dollar a pound. The average weight of a bale of this cotton was four hundred pounds, so I saw go up in smoke a crop worth fifty thousand dollars. The family was impoverished. I recall that no shoes could be bought for the negroes and food began to be hard to obtain.

It had been the custom of the plantation to lay in stocks of groceries and shoes, boots, etc., by wholesale. Barrels of sugar, sacks of green (unroasted) coffee beans, barrels of molasses, etc., were bought and brought to the Plantation. The wagons which carried the cotton to the market in the fall would return laden with cases of shoes, boots and other supplies for the slaves. Meat of all kinds was raised on the plantation. The negroes were well-clothed in the winter, but except for the house servants, they went barefoot in summer.

Deprived of his stock and everything removable in the way of food stolen and carried away, his last dependence - the cotton crop burned, now an old man impoverished and broken, no wonder my father died promptly after contracting pneumonia the last year of the war.

After the death of my father, what was left of the estate was divided and apportioned by the executors. My mother retained one or two families of negroes, which had belonged to her before her marriage to my father. To me came our old coachman and his family, altogether about a dozen negroes. Given a choice of farms, my mother selected a farm of about five hundred acres located five miles from Brownsville, to the north of the town. Sister Sue named the place Hard Bargain. The farmhouse was out of repair and not large enough for our family, consisting of my mother, sister, and myself and - but this I did not know until later - my brother-in-law. My sister married about eight or nine months after we removed from the old homestead. Her marriage established a very mixed relationship: Her husband was the son of a Mr. Austin who had married my grandmother - my mother's mother - her second husband - and thus she seemed to marry her own and my uncle, though not at all related by blood to her. I always called him Uncle Albert. (He was Albert M. Austin).

We went to live for a time on another farm. It was located about twenty-five miles or more from the old homestead, something like twelve miles northwest of Brownsville. It was situated amongst woods and thickets in or near a creek bottom. Having enough open or arable land to employ our negroes and to raise an excellent crop, if we had only a sufficient number of mules and horses to plow and cultivate it. I think we had one wagon and a team of four mules. Also we took along the family carriage which remained with us. Anyhow, we moved down there and lived in a small house, probably a log house, for a year or a little more. My sister named this place Coon Dance, a very apt name as there were innumerable coons in the lowlands about the place.

The year was drawing to a close. There were bushwhackers and marauding bands of irresponsible men moving about. The family was in constant danger not only of losing what little portable property we had left, but our lives. Old Bill, our former coachman, and now my negro, constituted himself our protector with his three or four boys who were then just about grown, and organized another family of negroes into the group of family protectors. Certain it is when a band of these marauders was reported in the neighborhood, he took charge of the place.

We had furniture and furnishings barely enough for the negroes who were in cabins near the main residence and for ourselves. We had a little household silver which I think my mother had old Bill bury somewhere on the place.

There we were, then, two women and a small boy, in the woods far away from any responsible white neighbor, in charge of negroes. These faithful servants did the work of the farm and stood ready at all times to protect their "white folks" and I believe they would have given their lives if necessary to save the family.

This state of isolation and danger no doubt hastened the marriage of my sister. This was solemnized in this little old house and Uncle Albert joined the family.

Of this period of life in Coon Dance I have few recollections except numerous scares on account of approaching marauders.

"Uncle Albert" was engaged in a cotton brokerage business with connections in St. Louis. He could not remain all the time at Coon Dance but spent as much time there as practicable. He hunted a good deal and supplied the table with birds and squirrels.

My active participation in the regimen of the farm was to find and drive the cows from their wandering pasturage to the enclosure about the house to be milked.

This I did on the back of a very active pony. How I came in possession of this pony I haven't the least recollection. I am not certain he did not come to us from the old homestead on account of the following occurrence: Uncle Albert had a beautiful sorrel mare which he loaned to my father just before his last illness. This was the only saddle horse my father had. He rode this mare to church at Durhamville, the village about five miles from home, tied the mare to a tree or hitching post and went into the church and remained to the end of a Baptist congregation service. After the service he went out to get his mare for the trip home. Instead of the beautiful slick spirited animal he had left out there, he found a miserable pony, apparently almost starved and exhausted with a sore back, galled by pressure of a saddle. His mare had been stolen and this wretched pony left in its stead. It is possible the pony I rode after the cows at Coon Dance was this same pony but restored to good condition. This small animal was the nimblest and knowingest cow pony I ever knew. I had no saddle and rode the pony bareback. The cattle roamed free through unfenced fields and woods, weeds, and underbrush so thick that I, on this little horse, could see only a very short distance ahead. Except for the general direction I did not know where the cows had gone. It was up to me and the pony to find these straying cows: they had no bell on them. This pony seemed to know where to look for the cows and lost little time in finding them, rounding them up and starting them towards home. I was eight years old and knew nothing specially about herding cows; there must have been a dozen or more in the herd. The pony seemed to know intuitively when one of the cows was about to bolt away from the course she should go. He would rush towards this brute head her off in the proper direction, and take her back to the herd and keep all of them together until they had reached home. If a cow loitered along, nibbling grass and did not attend strictly to the business in hand, namely getting back home, Mr. Pony would pounce on her and give her a nip with his teeth and start her going. He was as nearly a perfect cow driving pony as one could find. I don't remember ever to have fallen off the pony. He was not tricky but a very active and nimble little horse and we had to go through thick undergrowth and over fallen trees and very rough ground. I fancy he took good care of me as well as the cows.

I think in about a year the renovation and additions were sufficiently advanced so that we could go to Hard Bargain. I distinctly remember the work was not completed when we moved in for the floor was not laid in one of the rooms. I remember this because in running across the bare sleepers I missed a step and fell between a pair and received a very severe bump on the forehead.

It was a rambling one-story wood house with cabins enough to accommodate all the negroes in about the same relative position and arrangement as they were at the old homestead, but many fewer cabins.

Here then, at Hard Bargain the family - my mother, Sister Sue and her husband and myself - settled. Old Bill in charge of the farm and farming operations. Uncle Albert took up a brokerage and cotton buying business in Brownsville five miles away. He rode in on horseback every morning and returned in the evening.

It was now at the close of the Civil War and Reconstruction Time had begun. The negroes knew they had been freed. They didn't know what to do with themselves. Freedom meant absolute license to some of them and immediate rise to equality with their former masters. It was a most trying period. Put in charge by the central federal government, the officials of state and county were as a rule not only foreign to the region, but entirely alien in sympathy and understanding. Carpetbagger rule was not as bad in West Tennessee as in the states immediately south of us. For a time there was complete chaos as regards the behavior of many of the negroes. There was, however, as far as I can recall, but one instance of trouble on our farm. A negro woman became insolent and talked of violence. It was our good fortune to have as commander of the garrison in Brownsville a level headed captain. Uncle Albert immediately reported the case to him, he took the trouble to come out himself immediately to investigate. I understand after looking into the matter he gave the woman a severe tongue lashing and told her he would see to it that she received an adequate physical thrashing if he heard again that she had forgotten herself. We had no more trouble with the negroes on the farm at any time. The former slaves who belonged to us begged to stay with us and work the farm. Indeed the negro foreman of my father's plantation asked to come to us with his family. He had fallen to the lot of one of the older children at the division after my father's death and had remained at the old homestead. Old Bill took charge of everything on the farm and kept a sharp eye and pretty firm discipline over the "hands".

I was now nine years old. I had never been in a school. I think my mother had taught me to read.

In the spring of 1865 a maiden lady organized a small school about three miles away from Hard Bargain. I was entered in this school and my education began.

Up to this time I wandered about learning a good deal practically concerning the appearance and habits of animals and birds. I must have become a good horseback rider. I had to learn to ride bareback and felt so at home on a horse or mule I was not afraid to race a pack of dogs which invariably ran out into the road and attacked me and my horse every time I passed the gate of a family that lived on the road about two miles from Hard Bargain

I am not sure now how long I continued in that little country school. Long enough to learn to read fairly well and do a little "ciphering". I walked to and from school morning and evening. I carried my lunch to school. After this I entered a large boys graded school (as far as the schools at that day were graded) located about six miles from Hard Bargain. My mother bought a horse and saddle and a good bridle for me. I rode six miles to and from morning and evening. My horse was what is called a cob by horsemen; a small compact bay youngster capable of considerable speed but especially of great endurance. A frisky and rather tricky little brute but not at all vicious. Billy and I not only became fast friends but boon companions; we understood one another perfectly. After getting out of sight of home Billy would set off at a gallop and except when we were fording streams (there were two or three on the way to school) we kept up this gait usually all the way.

Billy would shy at almost anything or nothing and while at the gallop would spring from one side of the road to the other. Until I became accustomed to his tricks he nearly unseated me several times, but it was always in fun. He did not try to take advantage and run away with me. In that region near the end of November and December sudden cold spells, regular northers, sometimes occurred during rainstorms. One day Billy and I started home from school in a rain; it got colder and colder and soon the rain froze as it fell. By the time we reached home my overcoat and saddle housing were covered by a sheet of ice and when I tried to dismount at home I found I was frozen to the saddle. The ice had to be broken away before I could get down.

I continued in that school for two years, until we moved to Brownsville. Uncle Albert had bought a lot and built a brick bungalow far out on West Main Street. To this we moved. After this I attended a large coed school called the Brownsville Academy. Here I remained until 1871. Then I entered college, [Bethel College, Russellville, Ky.] not quite sixteen years old...

In the midst of my junior year I was bowled over by a violent attack of what was called cholera; it could not have been Asiatic or the violently infectious kind, however. I was taken home and was desperately ill for several weeks and I recovered very slowly and spent more than a year in trying to recover health.

During the year, besides going to some watering places or mineral spring resorts, I took up the study of logic under the tutelage of the Baptist clergyman in Brownsville with two other young men. One was a very clever young dentist, the other was my half-brother, Lewis [Louis Powhatan (6) Estes] who had begun the practice of medicine in Brownsville.

In the year or more in which I was recuperating I rode horseback a great deal and hunted much of the time. My mother bought a beautiful young horse, only three years old when he came to me, but thoroughly broken and trained to the saddle. He seemed to be a product of the fine Kentucky saddle breed of horses. He was a very restless youngster; my sister named him Fidget. I taught Fidget to stand or graze while I shot birds all about him and shot many times from his back.

I had completed all the required courses for graduation at Bethel before my sickness except English and Logic... I had elected to study medicine. To complete this account I will say I did this and years later applied for a degree and was awarded an A.M. ...

MOREAU PINCKNEY (5) ESTES DESCENDANTS

REAR ADMIRAL WINSTON ESTES PILCHER (8) FOLK

Rear Admiral Winston Estes Pilcher (8) Folk, U.S. Navy, Ret., now resides in Old Lyme, Conn. The following are excerpts from an account of his long, illustrious naval career:

Rear Admiral Folk was in the Class of 1923, U.S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md. He was commissioned Ensign June 7th of that year and advanced in grade until his retirement 1 July 1955, with the rank of rear admiral.

After graduation, he served on: the battleship WEST VIRGINIA, the light cruiser GALVESTON; the destroyer TOUCEY; EAGLE 35; and the light cruiser RALEIGH. Then he was ordered to the Naval Academy in 1930 for duty as company officer in the Executive Department. He had duty with the Asiatic Fleet starting in 1932, serving first as chief engineer on the PANAY, a gun boat and later as executive officer of MONOCACY, another gun boat. In 1934 he was ordered to the Philippines to serve as Assistant Asiatic Communication Officer at Los Banos, the Philippines.

Rear Admiral Folk again served at the Naval Academy from 1935-37, when he was assigned duty as assistant first lieutenant and damage control officer on the battleship USS CALIFORNIA. Three years later he did duty as a meteorological officer at the Naval Air Station, Miami, Florida.

After Pearl Harbor Admiral Folk requested line duty and was finally granted in June, 1942, duty at Newport News, Va., in connection with fitting out USS BIRMINGHAM. He went aboard as first lieutenant and damage control officer when light cruiser was commissioned. BIRMINGHAM'S first combat assignment was Sicily. As a result of her Italian engagements she won the right to paint small German and Italian flags on her bridge; later, in the Pacific, BIRMINGHAM added numerous Japanese flags, and then became one of the few ships privileged to paint the flag of all three enemy nations on her bridge. Ordered to the Pacific, in August 1943, BIRMINGHAM participated in Tarawa and Wake Island. In October she engaged in the Solomons campaign and there she received her first battle damage. For outstanding service as damage control officer of the USS BIRMINGHAM during action on the night of November 8-9, 1943, Rear Admiral Folk received a letter of commendation with authorization to wear the Commendation Ribbon, from Admiral William F. Halsey, USN, Commander South Pacific Force, Pacific Fleet.

In January, 1944, Rear Admiral Folk became Executive Officer of BIRMINGHAM and in May 1944, BIRMINGHAM was back in action in the Shortland Islands. In June BIRMINGHAM participated in the amphibious assaults on Saipan, Guam, and Tinian in the Marianas.

BIRMINGHAM was then assigned permanently to Task Force 58, and participated in air strikes against Palau, the Philippines, Okinawa, and Formosa. BIRMINGHAM engaged in the Second Battle of the Philippine Sea on October 24, 1944. During this action, the carrier PRINCETON was mortally struck by a Japanese bomb and set ablaze. BIRMINGHAM was ordered to assist PRINCETON. In one of her attempts BIRMINGHAM drew alongside PRINCETON just as PRINCETON'S magazine exploded. The captain was wounded and Rear Admiral Folk assumed command of BIRMINGHAM. He rapidly organized the crippled ship and her company into a fighting unit, and was awarded the Combat Legion of Merit by Vice Admiral John Sidney McCain, USN, Commander, Second Carrier Task Force, Pacific Fleet.

On December 1, 1944, Rear Admiral Folk was detached from BIRMINGHAM and then served as Commanding Officer of U.S. WOODFORD, AKA 86, until she was placed out of commission on May 1, 1946. He was WOODFORD'S only naval officer. WOODFORD operated in the Pacific on independent duty and in support of amphibious operations in the final phase of the war. After V-J Day, WOODFORD was assigned to the initial occupation of Japan.

On June 6, 1946, Rear Admiral Folk was assigned for duty as Deputy Director of Civil Relations, Office of Public Relations, Navy Department, Wash., D.C. In 1949 he served as Chief of the Navy Section for North Atlantic Treaty Defense Planning (Europe), a NATO assignment with JAMAG (Joint American Military Advisory Group).

In 1951 Rear Admiral Folk was offered duty as Senior American Naval Officer on the staff of the naval commander in Western Europe in SHAPE (Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers Europe). He preferred command duty to staff duty and accepted an assignment as Commander United States Naval Activities, London, which duties he held until his retirement in July, 1954.

In addition to the Legion of Merit and the Commendation Ribbon, Rear Admiral Folk is entitled to the Purple Heart Medal, the Navy Unit Citation, the Yangtze Campaign Medal, the China Service Medal, the American Defense Service Medal, the American Area Campaign Medal, the European-African-Middle Eastern Area Campaign Medal with one battle star, the Asiatic-Pacific Area Campaign Medal with seven battle stars, the Philippine Liberation Ribbon with one battle star, the World War II Victory Medal, the Occupation Medal and the Korean War Medal.

ROBERT MCGILL (9) THOMAS

Robert McGill (9) Thomas, a reporter with the NEW YORK TIMES, reminisces about his immediate family and genealogies in general:

I always marvel when I imagine how many hundreds of ancestors were living at, say, the time of Columbus, and I think a genealogy helps give us both an anchoring perspective and a daring imagination in looking forward to the time when we may have hundreds of descendants. How curiously comforting to know there is a Record where the children whose faces and laughter we can never know can resurrect us in their hearts through a name, a pair of dates, a place or two and perhaps a line. I wonder what future generations will make of mother's [Jane Carey (8) Folk] tease "histrionic talents" as reported about her on p. 183 in the CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY that puzzled me as a child (and prompted me to look it up). Behind it, the promise of a semi-professional career in Nashville; an almost Broadway fling (the telegram from the producer coming only after she had committed herself to my father and marriage); elocution teacher as a young wife; and, much later, in a twist, a career as school speech therapist.

For myself, I'm afraid I won't be the one we'll all claim kin to. (It was such a special, secret knowledge to know the first name dropped by Carey Estes Kefauver.)

You asked for ancestor anecdotes, but I'm afraid my memories of my grandparents are hazy. Of my grandfather, [Carey Albert (7) Folk] who died when I was a toddler (and within a year of his second cousin, Smith [Smith William (7) Estes] if I read your chart correctly) I recall only tweed, mustache, the aroma of cigar and the sound of a voice now but a fading echo. I was impressed later by the knowledge that he employed an actual chauffer and read Latin with his feet on the fender. I remember my grandmother [Emma Harrison Gates Folk] better, as the perfect, delicate aristocratic lady, whose dignity was curried with humor and kindness. A regular visitor, she made me Cambridge tea, told me stories she'd heard as a girl and taught me stealing casino...

THE MOODY FAMILY

The Moody family's influence has been felt in many phases of life in Plant City, Fla. since 1903. Biographical sketches, from a history of that community, on Mary Noel (7) Estes Moody, Thomas Edwin (8) Moody, Jr., Frank Herron (9) Moody, James Shelton (9) Moody, and Henry Shelton (8) Moody attest to their prominence and service.

Gladys Elizabeth (8) Moody's son, William Reece (9) Smith, is one of the city's outstanding citizens. His life is depicted in three different items: (1) a Tampa, Fla., Chamber of Commerce newsletter; (2) notes from a program, "Wm. Reece Smith, Jr. Appreciation Day"; and (3) an article from a Plant City newspaper.

The next five biographical sketches are excerpted from PLANT CITY, ITS ORIGIN AND HISTORY by Quintilla Geer Bruton and D.E. Bailey, Jr., published by Valkyrie Press, Inc., St. Petersburg, Fla., 1977. (Permission for reprint here granted by Quintilla Geer Bruton.)

MARY NOEL (7) ESTES MOODY

Mrs. Moody had been extremely active in civic and church affairs in Athens and Lakeland and continued her activity in both areas in Plant City. She was a teacher in the Sunday School of the First Baptist Church for many years, served as president of the Women's Missionary Society. Continuously active in the Women's Club of Plant City, she served two terms as president. It was she who held the club together when it almost collapsed during World War II. And it was she who labored unceasingly to keep the club-sponsored public library in operation, devoting countless hours of her time to actual library work. Mrs. Moody served a term as vice-president of the Hillsborough County Federation of Women's Clubs, and was the organizer of the Junior Woman's Club of Plant City.

THOMAS EDWIN (8) MOODY, JR.

In 1903, Thomas Edwin Moody, Jr., organized the Moody Insurance Agency, which is still one of Plant City's leading businesses. His brother, Patrick Mann Moody, joined the business in 1913 and successfully managed the agency until his death in 1974, William Reece Smith became a partner in Moody and Moody in 1925 and became manager upon Pat's death.

Upon the death of Moreau Estes Moody, "Mr. Edwin" became president of the Hillsboro Bank and served until his death in 1948. He was a quiet and unassuming, but an extremely sincere, thoughtful and considerate individual. Upon his death, June 23, 1948, in an eulogy, his devoted service to the east Hillsborough community was summarized as follows: "In the bank, in civic groups, in this church (the First Baptist Church) which he loved second only to his God and to his family, he was the same gentle, generous, and helpful spirit. He was interested in every good word and work and no effort for the help of Plant City was denied his patronage.... His church honored him as she was honored by him... In every hour of jeopardy over the years, the gentle spirit of "Mr. Edwin" with colleagues of like mind have maintained the spirit in the bonds of peace."

FRANK HERRON (9) MOODY

Frank Herron Moody, second son of Thomas Edwin Moody and Anna Herron Moody, was born in Plant City, Florida, on November 23, 1911. He graduated from the University of Florida with a BSBA degree in 1934. Upon graduation he began his banking career with the Hillsboro State Bank, was elected to serve first as a director in 1948 and then as president in 1963. He now holds the position of president and chairman of the board of Hillsboro Bank.

Frank Herron Moody has been active in the Florida Bankers Association. He served as chairman of the Agricultural Division and as a member of the board of directors of the association. Presently, he is a member of the board of directors of the South Florida Baptist Hospital. Recognizing the need for higher education for persons of all ages, he has actively promoted the Hillsborough Community College. He has served as president of the Chamber of Commerce, the Industrial Committee, and the United Fund. Because of his participation in community affairs he was selected to receive the award as Outstanding Citizen of Plant City in 1962. In Kiwanis International, he has served in many capacities and was elected as Governor of the Florida District in 1964. The Boy Scouts of America has awarded him the Silver Beaver Award. The Future Farmers of America has recognized him with the Honorary State Farmer degree. As an elder of the First Presbyterian Church, he has served as a delegate on two occasions to the General Assembly and as a moderator of Westminster Presbytery.

JAMES SHELTON (9) MOODY

Judge James Shelton Moody was born in Plant City December 29, 1914, third son of Thomas Edwin Moody, Jr., and Anna Louise Herron Moody. He was graduated, cum laude, from the University of Florida Law School in 1939 and began practice in his home town. The same year he married Irma Cone, a native of Georgia. In 1941 he formed a law partnership with John R. Trinkle. From 1943-1946 he served in World War II, with service in the Counter Intelligence Corps of the US Army in the European Theatre.

In 1948, he was elected to the state legislature, and served continuously until November 1957, when he was appointed a circuit judge of the Thirteenth Judicial Circuit of Florida, by Governor Leroy Collins. As chairman of the Appropriations Committee for three consecutive sessions, Representative Moody was instrumental in passage of legislation establishing the University of South Florida at Tampa, and procuring an eight-million-dollar appropriation for the initial construction program.

From 1953-1955, Representative Moody served on the Constitutional Revision Commission of Florida. He received the Jaycee's Good Government Award in 1957. In 1957 he was selected the most valuable member of the House of Representatives by the Florida news media. That same year he was named the most valuable legislator by both the Florida House and Senate. Governor Collins, in presenting these awards, stated: "You are one of the most completely dedicated men I have known. . . .Public office to you, Jim Moody, is indeed a public trust, a burning obligation to which you have applied, without flinching, your mind, your energies and your heart."

Judge Moody has distinguished himself on the bench, being selected to serve as President Judge of the Thirteenth Judicial Circuit from 1963 to 1965; chairman of the Circuit Judges' Conference of Florida from 1970-1971; and a judicial member of the Judicial Qualifications Commission of Florida from 1966-1975, serving as vice-chairman in 1974-1975. His service to the Bench and Bar includes active participation on numerous committees of the Florida Bar and the Conference of Circuit Judges of Florida.

In Plant City he was the original promoter and joint organizer of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association 1954 (now Sunshine State Federal Savings and Loan Association). A member of the board of directors, he served as first chairman of the board. He has been a director of the Strawberry Festival Association since 1948, and was, until his resignation in 1975, a director of the Hillsboro Bank, and a director of the Plant City Golf and Country Club. He is an elder of the First Presbyterian Church of Plant City.

HENRY SHELTON (8) MOODY

In 1925, Edwin's brother, Henry Shelton Moody, came to work in the Hillsboro State Bank, but after six months he moved to Bradenton to head a new bank there, the Manatee River Bank and Trust Company, now the Southeast Manatee National Bank.

WILLIAM REECE (9) SMITH

The TAMPA COMMERCE, newsletter of the Greater Tampa Chamber of Commerce, Tampa, Fla., July 1977 issue had this lead-off article on Reece Smith:

CHAMBER TO HONOR REECE SMITH

Wm. Reece Smith, Jr., the much admired interim President of the University of South Florida, will be honored for his year in office during a Chamber sponsored luncheon at noon, July 29 at the Holiday Inn Central.

A well-known Tampa attorney, Smith was named interim president on Sept. 1, 1976, following the resignation of Dr. Cecil Mackey. A former president of The Florida Bar, Smith is president of Carlton, Fields, Ward, Emmanuel, Smith and Cutler, which has law offices in Tampa, Orlando and Pensacola.

As interim president, he was held in such high esteem that a large percentage of faculty members signed a petition asking permission to submit his name as a candidate for the permanent president. Students, staff and many state-level education and government officials joined in the draft-Smith movement. Smith did reconsider, but finally decided he would return to his law practice.

During his term of office, Smith was responsible for such achievements as saving the doctoral programs when there was a threat to remove them from USF.

He believed so strongly that higher education should receive more funding that he registered as a lobbyist and went to Tallahassee several times during the 1977 legislative session to secure more dollars for the State University System as a whole and USF in particular.

Smith also has taken on the thorny issue of the autonomy of USF's regional campuses (St. Petersburg, Sarasota and Fort Myers), a complex problem for which it is difficult to find a single acceptable solution. Although the issue has not been resolved, Smith has used all of his talents to keep the various parties at peace while an acceptable solution is being sought. . . .

Friday, July 29, 1977 was Wm. Reece Smith, Jr., Appreciation Day at the University of South Florida. The program of events included a breakfast of the Alumni Association in the President's dining room, luncheon with the Tampa Chamber of Commerce at Holiday Inn Central, and an All-University Party at the University Center ballroom; a Reece Smith Appreciation Dinner, hosted by the President's Council, Council of Advisors, and Alumni Assn. in the University Center ballroom, and a USF Theatre Production, "Carnival" (with special dedication to President Smith) at the University Theatre. The following summary of Reece Smith's accomplishments appeared in the program:

DEDICATION

Wm. Reece Smith, Jr., was appointed Interim President of the University of South Florida in September, 1976, by the Florida Board of Regents. A resident of Tampa since childhood, President Smith has served both his community and the University well through his capable and caring leadership as a prominent attorney, University President, and active citizen. During his brief tenure at USF, President Smith has won the respect and support of faculty, staff and students through his precise logic, deep insight, and comfortable style of leadership. To honor his contributions, the faculty, staff, and students dedicate this day Wm. Reece Smith, Jr., Appreciation Day.

The following is an article about Wm. Reece Smith, Jr., from the PLANT CITY OBSERVER, Wednesday, February 21, 1979, covering his nomination for the presidency of the American Bar Association, which is tantamount to election. The election took place in August 1979:

SUCCESS NO SURPRISE by Kathryn Cooke

It came as no surprise to many Plant Citizens that William Reece Smith, Jr. has received national acclaim by being nominated as 1980 president of the American Bar Association. ... the home folks who watched him grow to manhood knew he was headed for success.

Mrs. Nita Holmes, vice principal of Plant City High School in 1943, the year young Smith graduated, recalled that he was "outstanding; an excellent student scholastically and a good athlete."

"Reece was well-rounded and had varied interests," said the former school official. "He was active in all facets of the school's activities."

These sentiments were echoed by Mrs. Frances Hull who was Smith's 10th grade English teacher. "He was very bright, capable in every way," Mrs. Hull remembered. "I'm so proud of him . . ."

His father, William Reece Smith, Sr., a Plant City insurance executive, did his best to keep from boasting about his son's ability and accomplishments.

Trying to camouflage the pride that glowed from his eyes, the father modestly allowed as how, "Reece was an average student" and then after a pause, affirming, "Oh, yes, he was chosen for membership in Phi Beta Kappa National Honor Fraternity, Blue Key Honorary at University of Florida, and Reece was a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford.

Still trying to be modest, the father admitted that his son was a top football player for Plant City High School and as a back, played in the first Gator Bowl at Jacksonville, when he was a student at the University of South Carolina . . .

MOREAU PINCKNEY (5) ESTES DESCENDANTS (Continued)

Patrick Mann (7) Estes, co-author of the CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY, was eulogized in the House of Representatives of the United States in 1947 by our cousin, the late senator from Tennessee, (Carey) Estes (8) Kefauver. The text of Kefauver's speech comes from the Congressional Record.

Patrick's daughter, Martha Noel (8) Estes Lawrence's philanthropic work in Nashville, Tenn. is described in a newspaper article.

PATRICK MANN (7) ESTES

From the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD -- Appendix, 1947, p. A877:

Mr. KEFAUVER, Mr. Speaker, in a tragic accident in Nashville, Tenn., February 17, the life of Patrick Mann Estes and four other prominent Nashvillians were taken. P.M. Estes, over a course of many years, was known and highly respected by not only the Members of the Tennessee delegation but by numerous Members of the Senate and House from other States. These Members join his countless friends and admirers in mourning his passing.

Mr. Estes was eminently successful in his own business of law and insurance. However, he devoted the larger part of his life in a diligent and unselfish effort to improve and build up his country, and especially the land of the South to which he was so devoted. We find inspiration and encouragement in his many deeds, and it is for that reason I take this occasion of paying respect to his life, character, and accomplishments.

Over a course of more than 50 years Mr. Estes stood at the forefront in the various campaigns to protect the American way of life and to give the people of the South an even chance in our national development. He was a pioneer in motor transportation facilities and he did much to foster the building of good highways in Tennessee and throughout the Nation. He helped to organize the Tennessee Good Roads Association and he later became its president. He fostered the organization of the Natchez Trace Association and through his untiring efforts he was able to get much accomplished toward building of the Natchez Trace. His devotion to this project knew no limits. He was always willing to accept responsibility. At one time he was a member of the Tennessee State Legislature. He was a vice president of the United States Chamber of Commerce. He was the national president of the Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity and his efforts and generosity are some of the reasons for the success of this national organization.

During his active and useful years, Mr. Estes kept well informed on Federal legislation and was quick to analyze the results of such legislation on the national economy. Frequently, as a private citizen, he would journey to Washington to discuss legislative bills with his friends in Congress. His viewpoint was always that which would be of the most benefit for the Nation, the independent business, and the average citizen. He was persuasive and vigorous in presenting his position even though it might conflict with his own personal interests. An example of this laudable characteristic can be found in his interest and work in strengthening the antitrust laws and in securing their more forceful execution. From a selfish viewpoint he probably would have benefitted by the monopolistic trend, but his interest in the future of America and the small businessman caused him to be one of the most effective advocates of the strengthening of the Nation's antitrust program. In this connection he felt that the one immediate need was for Congress to amend section 7 of the Clayton Act so as to prevent one corporation from acquiring the assets of another when the result would be to create a monopoly. The original Clayton Act had prevented the acquisition of capital stock where a monopoly would result but monopolistic interests avoided this prohibition by simply acquiring the assets of their competitors. Mr. Estes in letters to me relative to the necessity of this amendment wrote: "I regard this amendment as of extreme importance, I see no advantage in the United States Government spending large sums of money to establish small business, when they will be gobbled up by the trusts as soon as they begin to make their weight felt. In the meantime consolidations have been going on steadily. You will notice in Time one of the most recent was the sale of the large California steel plant to United States Steel. Unless these matters are checked our form of government must necessarily be changed, which I would greatly regret.

These monopolies are very shortsighted in their course, for they constantly contrive by their greed for power and size to bring about a Governmental restriction, etc., of which they so greatly complain. But after all, it might be a wise policy from their standpoint for the reason that they can exist under restrictions, or mold them so as not too greatly hamper them, whereas they would be utterly destructive of the little man, and thus eliminate competition."

Mr. Estes in addition to his private business and his public interest was the scion of his family. He kept in close touch by personal visits and through correspondence with his many relatives throughout the country and he was always happy to give them friendly counsel or material assistance. He was indeed a lovable, capable, and useful man. The good things he did will leave a worthwhile imprint on the lives of many people and of many institutions in the generations to come.

One of the loveliest tributes to him was written in the form of a poem by a gracious relative, Mrs. May Folk Webb, of New York City. It is as follows:

A Tribute to Patrick Mann Estes, January 27, 1872 - February 16, 1947
He lives in the hearts of his fellow men,
By thoughts which he constantly gave to all,
In forgetting self to help other's needs,
And for faithful service to duty's call.

Those who knew him had words of praise and love,
For his quiet and gentle-mannered ways
Of lifting sorrow and of bringing cheer,
To brighten hours of dark laden days.

His deeds have built a monument so high,
That its lofty height is seen far and wide,
Shining with the tender love of his life,
Given in trust to those on the roadside.

Memory can never forget his life,
For it is deeply woven among friends,
And kindness to his family and kin,
Are written where gratitude never ends.

Yes, Patrick Mann Estes will ever live,
In affectionate heart of everyone,
To whom he brought blessings of happiness,
Through his great soul in tune with God's own son.

This is a feeble expression for one so honored
And beloved by thousands of friends.

—May Folk Webb.

MARTHA NOEL (8) ESTES

Martha Noel Estes (Mrs. Jos. Pinckney Lawrence) was lauded for her civic leadership in this article of the TENNESSEAN, August 22, 1977:

Mrs. Martha Lawrence, the first woman to serve on the St. Thomas Hospital Association Board, has been re-elected a member of the board, according to James O'Hara, chairman of the board.
She first joined the board in 1968 when Reber Boulton was chairman. She served two three-year terms.
MRS. LAWRENCE was a faithful volunteer for 12 years in the old St. Thomas Hospital in the early 1940's; And working with the Ladies of Charity she was instrumental in founding the St. Thomas Auxiliary.

The former Martha Estes, she is a native Nashvillian and has been a volunteer in many civic endeavors. She was president of the Nashville Junior League from 1932 until 1934 and president of the Ladies of Charity from 1947 until 1950. In the late 1930's she re-activated the Red Cross Motor Corps, which consisted of a small group of volunteer women who drove two-ton trucks, delivering blood to hospitals.

Mrs. Lawrence is presently serving on the governing board of Aquinas College and is an honorary member of St. Mary's Villa.

HER HUSBAND Joseph P. Lawrence was a principal in the electrical supply firm Hebrick and Lawrence before his retirement. The Lawrences live on Tyne Boulevard.

Mrs. Lawrence has two children by a previous marriage, Gray (Mrs. Robert) Bolster and Sydney Keeble, Jr.

She succeeds Arthur Reed to the Associate Board position. Reed has been named to the hospital's new Development Committee.

The Association Board is a group representing the area's business, religious and civic community, which meets in an advisory capacity to the hospital's board of directors and administrative staff.

St. Thomas Hospital is a 410-bed private, non-profit hospital operated by the Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent dePaul.

THE RICE FAMILY

Katherine Estes (8) Rice Lowe was a brilliant, talented woman who lived in Nashville, Tenn. during the exciting twenties. She mingled with writers well-known at her university, Vanderbilt, and designed beautiful buildings which stand today as testimony to her architectural abilities. She also left a novel which her daughter, Kitty Lowe-Ebersole, hopes to have published. We learn about Katherine Lowe in a letter from Kitty, who also sent information about her brother Harold.

Harold Gladstone Lowe, Jr., is a well-known Nashville news photographer who has earned numerous awards for his work. We include excerpts from his activities.

Donald Rice Lowe, Kitty's son, has a souvenir cap, courtesy of cousin Senator Estes Kefauver, through the urgings of his mother, who spent many childhood summers with Estes at "Estes Hall", built in 1825 by Joel (4) Estes. A picture of Don in his precious cap appears elsewhere in this book.

Thomas Jefferson (8) Walker, son of Mattie Sue (7) Rice, exemplified leadership throughout his life in farm organizations in Tennessee, and his tenacity for getting things done resulted in having a huge bridge constructed across the Mississippi River near Dyersburg. The only other way to get to Kentucky from that area is by a "ferry" which consists of a wooden raft (reminiscent of Huckleberry Finn's) which holds just a few cars. His community honored him for his efforts with a "Thomas Walker Day".

Myra Landrum Bacon Rice, the second wife of Ralph Estes (7) Rice, represents Southern graciousness and love of family. She kept in touch throughout her long life (over 90 years) with all the cousins in the Moreau Pinckney line. Having lived at "Estes Hall", a headquarters of that family branch, she knew them very intimately, since many visited and summered at this homestead. We read of Katherine Lowe, above, as having spent summers there with cousin Estes Kefauver, and, in a biography of Estes Kefauver later on, we read again of his summers at "Estes Hall", referred to as "Uncle Joe's" (Joel Henry (6) Estes). Myra's mother, Minnie Landrum (Bacon), was the third wife of Joel Henry.

A biographical sketch, excerpts from an obituary, and a letter written about her by her pastor tell a small part of the story of the life of Myra Landrum Bacon Rice, one of the best loved of the Estes family ladies.

KATHERINE ESTES (8) RICE LOWE

Katherine Rice (9) Lowe-Ebersole wrote this biographical sketch about her mother:

My mother..., under her "nom de plume" of Katherine D'Este, was a member of the "Fugitives" -- a group of well-known writers at Vanderbilt University in the 1920's, of which she was the only contributing woman member. Her contemporaries and fellow members included John Crowe Ransom, Merrill Moore, and a number of others of lesser fame. She had nationwide circulation as a poet, contributing to well-known literary magazines of that period. Her one novel, which Mac-Millan accepted and sent back for re-write... was never re-submitted for publication. However, I, myself, am undertaking to edit it in her stead, and re-submit it for publication, as the story is timeless. There are also quite a few poems (also unpublished) which I may edit as a follow-up, and even weave into it a biography of this fascinating, indomitable woman who earned world-wide recognition before her untimely death...

Momma was also a renowned architect. Many of the most beautiful houses in Nashville, built between 1930 and 1950, were designed by her, and co-signed by another architect, as she was not licensed. They are still copied today!

HAROLD GLADSTONE (9) LOWE, JR.

Excerpts from biographical notes contributed by his sister, Katherine Rice (9) Lowe-Ebersole:

He was a news photographer for THE NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN from 1960 to 1965. His work was published in LIFE, NEWSWEEK, U'S' NEWS & WORLD REPORT and TIME. A photo cover of U.S. NEWS & WORLD REPORT resulted in frequent assignments from that magazine. He was nominated for a Pulitzer Prize for a vote fraud story, was winner of THE TENNESSEAN'S President's Award (Best Picture) over 25 times and won first place in a spot news photo award in 1963. During this time he was their Correspondent and operated the Newspicture Bureau for UPI.

From 1965 to 1972 he was with WEM-TV as a newsman and sound cameraman. He reported and filmed many assignments in Washington, for NBC "Today" and "Nightly News" programs. He is one of the few photographers with clearance to photograph the President in the Oval Office. He filmed and edited a documentary that won him a Nashville Advertising Association "Diamond Award" in 1970.

From February 1973 to August 1976 he worked for WNGE-TV and WSIX radio, both in Nashville, and was a free lance photographer for THE TENNESSEAN. He was with WTVF-TV as a staff news photographer from August 1976 to June 1978. At present he is the Photographic Supervisor, Public Relations, Dept. of Employment Security, Nashville, Tenn.

DONALD RICE (10) LOWE

Katherine Rice (9) Lowe-Ebersole contributed this story about how her son got an "Estes Kefauver" coonskin cap. (See photo of Don "modeling" his hat elsewhere in this book).

You mentioned the late Estes Kefauver in your letter: he and Mama grew up together at her Grandma's [Katherine Klyce Rice] farm down in Brownsville, Tennessee. They were close until Estes' death and Mama [Katherine Estes Rice] and Nancy [Estes' widow] were quite close and corresponded until Mama's death. When Estes ran for the Presidency, his "trademark" was the 'coonskin cap. Don, my son, was captivated by the 'coonskin cap -- both of Estes and of Daniel Boone, his favorite TV hero of the time. So he, with Mama's help, wrote Estes a letter requesting a 'coonskin cap. Estes sent it to him in the NEXT MAIL, much to Donny's delight. Here's a snapshot of him, posing in it, with his toy 30-30 Winchester. (He had the flu when it arrived.)

THOMAS JEFFERSON (8) WALKER

Thomas Jefferson Walker Day was celebrated March 19, 1973 in Dyersburg, Tennessee, culminating in a banquet in his honor at the Dyersburg State Community College. Here is a sampling of the press coverage of this event:

STATE GAZETTE, March 20, 1973 (permission granted for reprint here)
BANQUET HONORS THOMAS WALKER

. . . Acting as master of ceremonies, James Putman, president of the Dyer County Farm Bureau, introduced guests who described Walker's affiliation with their individual organizations. . . Above all other things, Walker was described as holding his devotion to God as the most important factor in his life.

When Putman finished his introduction of the guest of honor, Dr. H.J. Burkett, retired minister of the First Methodist Church of Dyersburg of which Walker was a member, was asked to speak. Burkett told those present that Walker had held positions on the board of trustees, the board of advisors, the building committee, the evangelism committee, and several posts in the church. Walker has also held several positions on the district and conference level in the Methodist Church, according to Dr. Burkett. . .

Walker was presented with a proclamation from Mayor David Lanier naming March 19 as "Thomas J. Walker Day" and commending him on his community activities and contributions. . .

At the end of the speeches of recognition, Walker was presented with a plaque and a sport coat and pair of trousers. Mrs. Walker was presented with a set of cut crystals. Both received the "thanks" of the people of Dyer County. In his closing remarks, Putman quoted some remarks made by Walker several years before, one of which read, "When we fail to perform the services that we were designed to surrender, we open the door to outside interference." And another, "It's not enough to be against, what are you for?"

TENNESSEE FARM BUREAU NEWS, April 1973 (permission granted for reprint here)
TRIBUTE PAID TO LONG-TIME DYER AGRICULTURAL LEADER

Thomas J. Walker has been an influence on Tennessee and Dyer County Agriculture for over 50 years, and last month the Dyer County Farm Bureau decided to do something about it. In doing so, they involved just about every agricultural agency in the county and some from across the state.

Mr. Walker was a charter member and past president of the Dyer County Farm Bureau and has been a board member for many years. As a charter member, he helped in the organization work in 1934, and served as secretary until he was elected president in 1944.

He was the first president of the Tennessee Farmers Cooperative, and also served as president of the Dyer Farmers Co-op for many years. He has also served as president of the Tennessee Crop Improvement Association and a former member of the Tennessee Soil Conservation Committee.

He helped organize the Dyersburg Production Credit Association, served as as ASC committeeman, and as president of the Dyer County Fair Association.

Thomas Jefferson Walker, Sr. was also instrumental in having a bridge built over the Mississippi River, as noted in this article from the Friday, November 5, 1976 issue of the COMMERCIAL APPEAL of Memphis, Tenn. The interview reported here actually took place on the bridge itself. (Permission granted for reprint here).

Thomas J. Walker on his "Dream Bridge" as it Nears Completion
TENNESSEE BRIDGE PLANNER LIVES TO SEE RIVER LINK BECOME REALITY by Jan Taylor

"Caruthersville wanted the bridge right at Caruthersville and Dyer County wanted it closer to them. We finally decided if we couldn't get together, we would never get a bridge. It was then we agreed to ask the U.S. Engineers to select the best site for the bridge." Thomas J. Walker

DYERSBURG, Tenn. -- Five men from Tennessee and five from Missouri met in 1949 to start planning and pushing for a bridge to link West Tennessee with the Missouri Bootheel.

Twenty-seven years and a lot of ferry rides later the Interstate 155 Mississippi River Bridge will be opened to traffic Dec. 1.

Just one of the first five Tennessee planners, Thomas J. Walker, 75, of Dyersburg, is alive to cross it.

"I had never given up hope that the bridge would be built," Walker said Thursday as he toured the one-third-mile-long bridge that cost $31 million. "There were times that we became mighty discouraged, but the need was there, and it increased through the years."

Walker was appointed by Gov. Gordon Browning to the first Tennessee-Missouri Bridge Commission and he remained for seven years.

"We were just a bunch of ordinary folks. I was a farmer and there were a couple of bankers and lawyers and one engineer. We didn't know anything about bridge building, but we were determined we would find a way to get one built."

Walker was a cousin and close friend of the late Sen. Estes Kefauver, who was interested in the bridge, and his farm was located 15 miles from the river.

"The river was a barrier to trade. You either had to take a ferry across the river, which many people refused to do, or travel 100 miles to Memphis or Cairo, Ill. to cross a bridge. Caruthersville is only 25 miles away, but many Dyer Countians had never been there," Walker said. . . .

The bridge crossing is located at Boothspoint in Dyer County, about 20 miles west of Dyersburg, and about 10 miles from Caruthersville. (the compromise reached between the two towns)

Opera star Marguerite Piazza and Tennessee Gov. Ray Blanton and Missouri Gov. Christopher 'Kit' Bond will help dedicate the bridge Dec. 1. . . .

MYRA LANDRUM BACON RICE

Ralph Estes (7) Rice married Myra Landrum Bacon. These three items were sent by their son, Milton Bacon (8) Rice:

Excerpts from the STATE GAZETTE, Dyersburg, Tenn., Thurs. Oct. 19, 1978:

MYRA BACON RICE. . . daughter of Thomas J. and Minnie Landrum Bacon. In 1889 after the death of her father in April 1887, the family, which included her brother, Milton Bacon, moved to Ripley, Tenn., to reside at "Grasmere" the home of Marshall Daniel Majors, who was married to a sister of her mother. She attended the Ripley city schools until the remarriage of her mother to Joel Henry Estes on Dec. 9, 1904, after which the family moved to "Estes Hall" in Haywood Co., Tenn. She attended Belmont College in Nashville and taught school in Haywood Co. until she married Ralph Estes Rice on May 28, 1919 and made Dyersburg, Tenn. her home until her death, just six days short of her 92nd birthday.

MYRA B. RICE. . . served as Regent of the Key Corner Chapter of DAR, president of the Dyersburg Woman's Club and was a member of the Hillside Garden Club.

A letter to Milton Bacon Rice, dated Nov. 11, 1978:

Dear Milton: Your mother was indeed a very special person. There developed a wonderful relationship between us, and I was so grateful. This has happened with a few other persons across the years, and it becomes one of the joys of the Christian ministry.

Certain words come to mind when I think of Mrs. Rice: gentleness, alertness of mind, no deep prejudice - rather an openness to ideas and people, a natural courtesy and politeness. There are other words of description, but these let you know how she impressed me.

May God Bless You. May the years ahead be filled with joy because of the memories which are yours.

ALBERT CAREY (6) ESTES DESCENDANTS

Senator (Carey) Estes (8) Kefauver has earned himself a place of honor in American history. The most illustrious of all the contemporary Estes, a biography of him, summarized here, gives a comprehensive portrait of the public and private lives of this famous, indomitable, American statesman. The summary recounts a childhood incident that helped shape his character, how he stood up to a political boss and the giants of industry, and how he believed in the "dignity of every human being."

His wife, Nancy Pigott Kefauver, was a talented artist, and, after the Senator's death, was appointed by President Kennedy to select appropriate paintings and objets d'art for each of our embassies around the world (all by American artists). Some of Nancy's background and accomplishments are depicted in excerpts from four newspaper articles.

Ada Virginia (8) Estes, (movie name, Virginia Bradford), left her native Memphis, Tenn. for Hollywood and stardom in the 1920's. She made four films, starring in one and playing the second female lead in the other three. The NEW YORK TIMES review of her starring film, "The Wreck of the Hesperus" is quoted and summarized here. Lead-ins of the other three films are included to show the calibre of actors with whom she worked (leading men such as Ronald Coleman and Warner Baxter). One of her films was the screen adptation of the well-known George Kelly play, CRAIG'S WIFE. Her love of another form of art, painting, won out over acting, and she abandoned a promising movie career for the life of an artist in London.

Virginia's sister, Grace Estes, of Studio City, Calif., wrote that Virginia was said to have been the most beautiful woman in Hollywood. A photo of her appears elsewhere in this book. Grace wrote, "Virginia established three large apartments in London, quit the picture business during WWII, opening a place for our American soldiers. She now owns one guest house and one large studio. She is an artist as her beloved life work. She was with DeMille a few years -- also at Universal Studios."

Francis Moreau (7) Estes had a fascinating career and a long life. He was a miner of gold, platinum and silver in South America, and lived to the age of 91. His widow writes a vignette about him.

(CAREY) ESTES (8) KEFAUVER

STANDING UP FOR THE PEOPLE, a biography of the late Senator Estes Kefauver by Harvey Swados, published by E.P. Dutton, N.Y., N.Y., is an intimate portrait of the man. A summary of the salient events of his life, as covered in this book, follows:

When Estes was eleven years old he and his older brother, Robert, and some other friends, were swimming in the Tellico River in Tennessee (not too far away from "Estes Hall" in Haywood Co., where Estes spent many summers). Robert, who was not as good a swimmer as Estes, started to go under and called out for help. But it was too late when Estes, who was swimming quite a distance away, reached him. Estes gave Robert artificial respiration, but got no response from the unconscious Robert. The boys carried the limp body home, and Robert died several days later.

Estes always thought he had to over-compensate to his parents because of their loss of Robert. From then on he seemed to spend more time in his room, studying to better himself, reading biographies and histories. Nearly fifty years after this tragedy, just a few days before his own death, Estes confided to a close member of his staff:

If there is anything to religion. . . I ought to see my brother Robert again. I suppose it's odd, but I wonder to myself, if we'd meet, would he be a grown man? (p.3)

Well-heeded advice from his mother developed Estes' resilience, his gentleness, and his altruism:

She urged him to turn his stumbling blocks into stepping stones. . . . She instilled in him the moral righteousness that served later as a kind of ethical base for his own brand of Populism. "Leave no tender word unsaid," she wrote to him. . . . "Do good while life shall last." (p. 6)

His first political experience came when he and his father nailed "HE KEPT US OUT OF WAR" posters in support of Woodrow Wilson on trees in his native heavily Republican Monroe County. That was in 1916, and the next year, on a trip to Washington with his mother, he met Cousin Joe Folk, [Joseph Wingate (7) Folk] the former Governor of Missouri. To Folk's query on what he wanted to be, he answered decisively, "a lawyer". By high school his political goals were set. When signing a classmate's autograph book, he wrote under his name, "AMBITION — TO BE PRESIDENT." (p. 4)

Estes was constantly being accused of being a "darling of the Communists." Mr. Swados gives the details of one of these occasions and the amusing and caustic answer Estes had for his major antagonist, a political boss in Tennessee:

... an advertisement that appeared on June 10, 1948 in every newspaper in the state of Tennessee (read): ESTES KEFAUVER ASSUMES THE ROLE OF A PET COON. (The above accusations were charged to Estes. Kefauver replied) "The coon is a clean animal; it washes its food before eating. The coon is an American animal; it is found nowhere else in the world. The coon is a courageous animal; it can lick its weight in dogs any day. A coon has rings around its tail. . . . But this is one coon that will never have a ring through his nose." He added, "The coon is an easy animal to domesticate, but a mighty hard little critter to put a collar on." But the clincher came when the candidate announced defiantly, "I may be a coon, but I'm not Mr. Crump's pet coon." (Mr. Crump was E.H. Crump, a political boss in Tennessee at that time). (p. 37)

Kefauver was a strong advocate for governmental reform. He thought Congress should be more responsive to the people's needs. He opposed the electoral college, calling it:

"a loaded pistol pointed at our system of government. . . . It's continued existence. . . is a game of Russian roulette. Once the antiquated procedures trigger a loaded cylinder, it may be too late for the needed corrections." (p. 25)

He was one of the "architects" of NATO and, as Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee's Subcommittee on Antitrust and Monopoly, attacked the auto industry, oil companies, the "electric block's conspiracy," and the drug industry. His probings into the operations of the drug companies exposed the misuse of antibiotics, and forced drug companies to put warnings on these drugs. And, in the thalidomide expose, Senator Kefauver played the leading role. But he received more notoriety from his televised crime combatting role than from any of his other activities:

It had been one thing to read about faceless mobsters testifying before the committee as it moved from city to city. It was quite another to see them - and their political and law-enforcement buddies - on your television screen, squirming and wriggling under a barrage of questions from Halley, while Estes Kefauver, the MONITOR put it, scared the hell out of them. (pp.62 and 63)

It is ironic that the coonskin-capped mountain man, Davy Crockett, defeated our ancestor, Capt. (War of 1812) Joel Estes, the landed gentleman, for the Tennessee State Legislature in the early 1820's and, about a century and a quarter later, Joel's descendant, cousin Estes Kefauver, adopted Davy Crockett's coonskin cap as his political symbol.

Kefauver inadvertently did the late President Kennedy a favor by beating him out as the Democratic vice-presidential candidate to run with Adlai Stevenson in 1956 against the unbeatable General Eisenhower. Mr. Swados tells how the defeat turned out to be a plus for Kennedy. It could have ruined his chances of becoming president four years later, had he won the nomination in 1956:

The lesson was not lost on John F. Kennedy, as he later revealed in an interview with columnist Bob Considine. . . . "Joe would have been the politician of the family, not me. . . . Joe would have beaten Estes Kefauver last summer for the Vice Presidential nomination, where I just missed. It would have been a Stevenson-Kennedy Ticket." He paused and grinned. "And Eisenhower would have knocked his brains out. Right now, Joe would be picking up the broken pieces of his political career." The young Senator paused again. "I guess I owe a lot to Estes," he said reflectively. (pp.114 and 115)

From Harvey Swados' portrait of Senator Estes Kefauver, one attribute stands out: his love, respect, and concern for all people. He saw:

... the dignity of every human being [as the] cement [that] was needed to bind men together. On that foundation he would have built a broader, more enduring government than this planet has ever seen. (p. 55)

NANCY PATERSON PIGOTT

(Carey) Estes (8) Kefauver married Nancy Paterson Pigott. These newspaper items were excerpted from material sent by Nancy (8) Kefauver Fooshee, Estes' sister, of Knoxville, Tenn.:

From the MADISONVILLE DEMOCRAT, May 22, 1935:

KEFAUVER—PIGOTT Announcement was made in Chattanooga Sunday by Mr. and Mrs. Stephen J. Pigott, of Glasgow, Scotland, of the engagement of their daughter, Nancy Paterson, to Estes Kefauver, of Chattanooga. The marriage will be an event of late summer, taking place in Glasgow.

Miss Pigott spent the past fall in Chattanooga visiting her aunt, Mrs. John L. Hutcheson, and uncle, Samuel Thatcher Lewis. Her mother was the former Miss Mary Lewis, of Chattanooga.

Her father, formerly of New York, is a graduate of Columbia University. He is managing director of John Brown Co., Ltd., Clyde shipbuilders, Clydebank, Scotland, where the Cunard Liner, Queen Mary, is now under construction. Miss Pigott was educated at the Park School of Glasgow. She attended the Glasgow School of Art, finishing with a D.A. degree and diploma of design and mural decoration. She studied art and drawing in Paris also studied in London, where she worked for the imperial teaching diploma in Greek, operatic and ball-room dancing.

WIDOWS MOLD NEW LIVES IN ADOPTED HOME

To stay or go home, that's the question for Washington widows. Many stay in seclusion or in the limelight, and many make new lives for themselves. Such for example, was Nancy Kefauver, now a busy housewife, artist and State Department consultant.

By Kelly Smith, WASHINGTON (AP) — Mrs. Estes Kefauver walks up a narrow brick alley off embassy row, pushes aside a battered door and climbs steps to an artist's studio above an old garage.

She laughs, "Hi, everyone..." She dons a faded blue smock and picks up a paint brush. Ten years ago this lovely, green-eyed woman stood beside her husband in hope and heartbreak as the tall Tennessee senator traveled coast to coast with a handshake and a coonskin cap.

Those were the days when Kefauver was a household word a result of his investigations into organized crime, days of fighting for two presidential nominations, campaigning for vice president on the Adlai Stevenson ticket and finally, settling back into the Senate.

Suddenly, one August night in 1963, Kefauver died and his widow, Nancy, faced decisions:

WHETHER to return to Tennessee or remain in Washington, whether to further her husband's work (a widow often is offered her husband's unexpired term), whether to work and where, and eventually, how to mold and cope with a new identity. . . .

"I've been in Washington longer than I've been anywhere in my life," said Nancy Kefauver, reminiscing in an interview. She chose to stay where she and her lawyer husband first came in 1939.

She turned down suggestions that she succeed her husband in the Senate, saying, "My first responsibility is to my children. I am not trained or qualified for public office.

"THE AVERAGE wife isn't equipped to carry on. I was simply a housewife and an artist. I decided I had to work. I had to expand my (art) studio and teach fulltime -- I had three children left to get through college.".....

NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN, Sunday, November 19, 1967:

MEET MRS. NANCY KEFAUVER;

DRAB EMBASSY WALLS MADE RED HEAD BURN

By Virginia Keathley, Woman's Editor

WASHINGTON -- The drab look of the walls of the American embassies in foreign countries almost made red haired, green eyed Nancy Kefauver explode when she visited them officially with her husband, the late Senator Estes Kefauver.

"They often looked so dreary, there was nothing to show someone applying for a visa what our country is like. . . ."

. . . . in January 1963 the President [Kennedy] appointed Nancy Kefauver the first Advisor on Fine Arts for the Department of State.

PERSONAL FRIEND OF THE KENNEDYS -- "I know President and Mrs. Kennedy very well and we used to talk about the lack of representation of our culture abroad. . . .

"The day I took office I was told that new chancelleries had been completed in Dublin and Mexico City. 'OK,' they said, we want American art on the walls of those buildings in two months."

Today, collections of examples of American art now grace the walls of 76 of 112 American embassies from Togo to Malta. Twenty-seven other embassies have requested collections. . . .

They [Nancy's office in the State Department] publish a monthly Program Progress bulletin which includes a message from Nancy Kefauver, news from each embassy, and three or four pictures...

. . . . The job begins with a request from an ambassador and subsequent discussions in which Mrs. Kefauver learns his personal tastes and he learns "that as he represents the United States in diplomacy, so he should represent the whole of the American contribution in art, not his personal taste". . . .

OBSERVE MANY TABOOS -- NANCY SAYS, "There are taboos to be observed. A pig is a problem in Indonesia -- it's considered a filthy animal. No depressing photographs of bums in the Bowery. In the Middle East the bottom of the foot is an insult. No race riots -- no graphic nudes in the Near East and no cows in India. . . ."

ADA VIRGINIA (8) ESTES

Ada Virginia Estes, (stage name Virginia Bradford) was a silent screen actress. According to NEW YORK TIMES FILM REVIEWS, published by the NEW YORK TIMES, with Arno Press, in 1970, she appeared in four films in the late 1920's, all reviewed by Mordaunt Hall: (1) THE WRECK OF THE HESPERUS, her only starring film, suggested by Longfellow's poem of the same name; then as the second female lead in three others: (2) CHICAGO, adapted from the play by Maurine Watkins; (3) TWO LOVERS, based on Baron Orczy's novel of the same name; and (4) CRAIG'S WIFE, based on George Kelly's play.

In THE WRECK OF THE HESPERUS, the rest of the cast were: Sam DeGrasse, Francis Ford, Frank Marion, Alan Hale, Ethel Wales, Josephine Norman, Milton Holmes, James Aldine and Budd Fine. It was directed by Elmer Clifton. In his review of this film in the November 22, 1927 TIMES, Hall says of director Clifton, "He shows imagination so far as his ship and storm are concerned, but when it comes to handling a human being, he causes them to obey and that's all. It is quite obvious that Mr. Clifton might have elicited really worthy performances from some of his cast, for Virginia Bradford does exceedingly well in the circumstances..."

The Captain of the Hesperus, Slocum (Sam Degrasse) has problems with his daughter, Gale, (Virginia Bradford) whom he takes to sea "for company". he also takes on board her lover for a three year stint as punishment for having tried to elope with his daughter. That was asking for trouble. The lover, John Hazzard (Francis Ford) leaps into the sea to escape and safely reaches shore. A tremendous storm comes up, and Hall in his review tells the strange tale of Hazzard's rescue of the Captain's daughter, "Gale is too dazed by her father's actions, so terribly in love with Hazzard that she does not even move when water is tearing down the companionway. The Captain then performs the task of binding the girl to the mast, while Hazzard ashore is ingeniously arranging a rescue by means of a horse. Incidentally, this animal eyes Hazzard on two occasions in much the same way as the spectators may look at him when they perceive him going forth in a supposedly raging sea after tying a rope to the horse."

In CHICAGO, playing at the Gaiety Theatre, reviewed December 24, 1927, which was directed by Frank Urson, the cast of characters was: Phyllis Haver, Victor Varconi, Eugene Palette, VIRGINIA BRADFORD, Clarence Burton, Warner Richmond, T. Roy Barnes, Sidney D'Albrook, Otto Lederer, May Robson, Julia Faye, Robert Edeson, Viola Louie and others.

TWO LOVERS, at the Embassy Theatre, was reviewed March 21, 1928. Directed by Fred Niblo, the cast was: Vilma Banky, Ronald Colman, Noah Beery, Nigel de Bruller, VIRGINIA BRADFORD, Helen Jerome Eddy, Eugenie Bessefer, Paul Lukas, Fred Esmelton, Harry Allen, Marcella Daly, Scott Mattraw and Lydia Yeamans Titus.

FRANCIS MOREAU (7) ESTES

In a letter from his second wife, Zula Nebhut Estes, we read supplemental biographical material on Francis Moreau Estes, who is covered in the CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY:

Frank was the superintendent of a mining company in South America, mining gold, platinum and silver. He gave a large amount of gold fish hooks that had been dredged while mining in South America to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

Frank was a tall handsome man and a healthy one. He lived to be 91 years old and was active until a few months before he passed away. He was a very smart man and a very sweet gentle one.

BEDFORD MITCHELL (5) ESTES DESCENDANTS

Emily Alston (6) Estes Snedecor, and her minister husband, Dr. George Snedecor, were pioneers for black evangelization and education in the South. A bulletin from the black educational institution they actively supported all their lives (now part of the University of Alabama) gives some biographical data on these dedicated Christians.

Jesse Carlos (8) Maxwell, Jr., grandson of Emily and James Snedecor, is representative of the numerous businessmen in the Estes family. He advanced from a cement salesman to become the owner of over 20 plants. He is now President of Kyle-Gifford-Hall, Inc., of Scottsdale, Ga. A brief outline of his life from high school graduation to date sums up his accomplishments.

Estes (7) Snedecor, Sr., a paraplegic from childhood, had an indomitable spirit, and led a distinguished, exemplary life, as evidenced in a brochure published by a clinic bearing his name.

JAMES GEORGE SNEDECOR

James George Snedecor married Emily Alston (6) Estes. The following material about him was sent by Harriet (7) Snedecor Somerville, of Aliceville, Ala. It comes from an article "A Glance at the Past" in the STILLMAN BULLETIN, Stillman College, Tuscaloosa, Ala., April, 1976. She added this explanatory note: "Stillman was founded for the purpose of preparing black Presbyterians for the ministry." (Permission for reprint here granted by Stillman Institute -- now a part of the University of Alabama).

The third period in Stillman's history was successfully guided by Dr. James G. Snedecor and Reverend W.E. Hutchinson. Dr. Snedecor became the Superintendent on October 1, 1903 after having served a pastorate in Birmingham at the Woodlawn Church. He had been a member of the Executive Committee of Colored Evangelization for several years and come to know the importance of the school. Dr. Snedecor's greatest challenge was the securing of financial support for the Institute which had grown from an enrollment of 6 and a faculty of 2 in 1816 to 72 students and 4 faculty by 1903. The PCUS Church had not fully become aware of its role in the support of Black people especially as it related to the Church. Much of Dr. Snedecor's time was spent visiting churches, and telling the Stillman story.

Wherever possible, he would ask for a free will offering for the College. Sometimes he would be accepted, but many times he would be turned down. Perhaps Dr. Snedecor's greatest contribution throughout his 13 years at Stillman was his awakening of the church to the fact that they owed a duty to Black people. Because of ill health, Dr. Snedecor resigned his position in the spring of 1916 and on November 20, 1916, he passed away...

The same BULLETIN tells that "Mrs. James G. Snedecor" [Emily Alston (6) Estes] came to the Institute as Dean of Women in 1922 and left in 1929, and that the Emily Estes Snedecor [nurses training school] Building was erected the year she retired, 1929.

JESSE CARLOS (8) MAXWELL, JR.

Jesse Carlos Maxwell, Jr. contributed this outline of his varied activities since high school graduation. He is representative of many successful business men in the Estes family:

Grad. Tuscaloosa High School, 1929; University of Ala., 1933; US Coast and Geodetic Survey (surveying Fla. to Me.), 1933-35; Hardaway Contractor Co. (enr. Tuscaloosa lock and dam on Warrior River), 1935-38; Alpha Portland Cement Co. (salesman, Ga.), 1938-40; drafted -- US Air Force, basic tng. Atlantic City, OCS, Miami Beach, Fla., stationed Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, Discharged as Major, Mar. 1945 -- Oct. 1941-Mar. 1945; Alpha Portland Cement Co. (Southern Sales Mgr.) 1945-50; Atlanta Concrete Pipe Co. (Exec. VP), 1950-56; sold Atlantic Concrete Pipe to Vulcan Materials Co., Birmingham, Ala. (Gen. Mgr. Concrete Pipe Div.), 1956-1967; formed Kyle, Inc. Jan. 1, 1968 and purchased Concrete Pipe Div. from Vulcan Materials Co. - division consisted of 14 concrete pipe plants in SE, also 4 concrete block and 4 ready-mix concrete plants; sold Kyle, Inc. to ARC America, a division of Goldfield Group of London, Eng., Feb. 1, 1976.

ESTES (7) SNEDECOR

This undated brochure about the Estes Snedecor, R. Memorial Amputee Clinic, of Portland, Ore., was supplied by Estes Snedecor, Jr. (Reprinted with permission of the Rehabilitation Institute of Oregon, Portland, Ore.)

ESTES SNEDECOR, SR. -- ONE LEGGED, BUT NOT CRIPPLED

Last month, the Portland Rotary Foundation donated more than $10,000 to the amputee clinic at Good Samaritan. The story of this donation and the man who inspired it began 90 years ago, at the close of the 19th century... In 1897, a ten-year-old boy named Estes Snedecor fell and bruised his hip severely. The child was bedridden for two years with osteomyelitis (infection of the bone) and finally, a railroad surgeon was called to amputate the boy's right leg at the hip.

In spite of his leg amputation, the boy went on to lead an active social and physical life and to become an accomplished lawyer and judge. It was said that Mr Snedecor had two philosophies regarding his amputation; "one legged, but not crippled" and "the loss of a leg does not necessarily put one's personality on crutches."

One of eight children of a Presbyterian minister, Mr. Snedecor was born in a log cabin near Safety Harbor, Fla. on Dec. 21, 1887. He received two degrees with honors from the University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa. Moving to Portland in 1910, Mr. Snedecor practiced law until his appointment as a U.S. Referee in Bankruptcy, a position he held until his retirement in 1969.

Mr. Snedecor was an active participant in Portland civic, social and legislative affairs. And although he never used a prosthesis, he was an avid sportsman as well. Mr. Snedecor enjoyed tennis, rowing, and swimming, and was an excellent golfer. He also enjoyed mountaineering and in 1911 climbed 11,000-foot Mt. Hood with the aid of a crutch.

On May 15, 1974, Estes Snedecor died at the age of 86. After his death, the Portland Rotary Foundation began a memorial fund in his honor. Mr. Snedecor had been an esteemed Rotarian and at age 33 had served as president of Rotary International, the youngest man ever to hold that office. Under the direction of Mr. Snedecor's life-long friend, Edward C. Sammons, 10,350 was collected from volunteer donations. The money was given to the Good Samaritan Hospital Foundation to aid indigent patients at the Estes Snedecor, Sr. Memorial Amputee Clinic.

The donation allows the purchase of artificial limbs for needy amputees who otherwise could not afford them.

Estes History, Legends, & Documents

THE ESTES FAMILY OF ITALY

Much has been written on the Dukes of Ferrara of the House of Este and their progeny, famous and infamous. Caius Activius, or Azzo, 390 A.D., is the first Este of record, but his proud renaissance descendants claimed much earlier ancestry. Just as Virgil concocted a pedigree for Augustus Caesar, tracing him back to Aeneas and the Trojan War, Ariosto traced the Estes back to Hector and Priam.

The Estes of the Renaissance were a fascinating, motley group, and their good and evil have been celebrated in many media: statuary, paintings, prose, poetry, and even piano compositions. The remains of three of their palatial homes are still extant and may be visited, and likenesses of Estes in statuary and paintings may be seen in some of the great museums of the world. The legendary opulence which surrounded them even prompted a modern luxury hotel in Italy to borrow the Este name for itself.

The CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY states that we are probably descended from Francesco Esteuse (Este), a natural son of Leonello (1407-1450) who "went to Burgundy and afterward to England." These words were written on the back of a portrait of him which in 1939 was in a collection of paintings of the Estes near Ferrara.

We endeavor with a few items to give an overview of this many-faceted, colorful family. They played a vital part in the history of Italy. Politically, they were Guelphs (supporters of the Pope), in conflict with the Ghibellines (supporters of the Emperor). Ippolito d'Este became a Cardinal; and Lucrezia Borgia, second wife of Alfonso d'Este, Duke of Ferrara, was the natural daughter of Pope Alexander VI. (Alfonso was her third husband).

The Estes were great patrons of the arts. Ercole d'Este I (1431-1505) had two daughters who were renowned for their beauty, Beatrice and Isabella. Portraits of them are in museums today. Isabella had her portrait painted by Leonardo da Vinci and Titian, and is thought by some art experts to have been the model for da Vinci's world-famous "Mona Lisa" now at the Louvre in Paris.

After Ferrara was incorporated into the Papal States in 1598, the Estes still ruled Modena and Reggio, but, with Ferrara, the family lost its political power. Ercole d'Este III was the last duke. He was deposed in 1796 by the French and died in 1803. Maria Beatrice d'Este, his daughter, married Archduke Ferdinand of Austria, son of Emperor Francis I, who founded the House of Austria-Este. Their son and grandson, Francis IV and Francis V, ruled as dukes of Modena, Massa, and Carrara, when the Duchy of Modena was restored in 1815. Francis V was expelled in 1859, and in 1860 his territories were annexed to the Kingdom of Sardinia.

So the Estes had a long tenure in Italy. From their beginnings in 390 until the mid-19th century, over 14½ centuries, the House of Este played a prominent role in the history of Italy and also in the founding of royal houses in other European countries.

From ART BULLETIN, V, we read of the statuary and other decorations in the Este castle at Ferrara, Italy.

At Tivoli, one finds the remains of two Este houses -- one a castle and the other a villa. These are covered in a publication by the editors of REALITES magazine.

In a letter, the manager of the modern Villa d'Este dispels the myth that it, a luxury hotel, has any direct connection with the Este family.

To give a feeling for what kind of people the renaissance Estes were, we include three items: (1) the poem "My Last Duchess" by Robert Browning tells of a murder committed by one of the Dukes of Ferrara; (2) a poem by Ariosto, chief genealogist and poet of the Estes, written for their marriage, extolls Alfonso d'Este, Duke of Ferrara, and Lucrezia Borgia; and (3) a wall inscription from the Castello Estense (Estes Castle) in Ferrara, in Latin, with its English translation, capsulizes some of the highlights of the history of the flamboyant Estes who lived within the castle walls.

ESTE CASTLE, FERRARA, ITALY

Passages from ART BULLETIN V 37 1955, PIRRO LIGORIO AND DECORATION OF THE LATE SIXTEENTH CENTURY AT FERRARA, pp. 167-175, published by Art Bulletin, 16 E. 52nd St., N.Y., N.Y. (Permission to reprint these passages was given by the author, David R. Coffin.)

In July 1577 the Ferrarese painter Bartolomeo Faccini was killed by falling from a temporary scaffolding set up in the court of the Este Castle at Ferrara.

Faccini and his brother Girolamo had just completed decorating the four walls of the courtyard with frescoes depicting two hundred of the most notable members of the Este family which then ruled Ferrara. According to Cesare Cittadella, the Faccini had included a portrait of the contemporary duke, Alfonso II, with those of his ancestors. Since Alfonso II objected to the inclusion of his portrait, the artist had to erase it. It was only after all the scaffolding was removed that Bartolomeo Faccini discovered that he had forgotten to destroy the name and arms of the Duke which had been below this portrait. It was this which caused the erection of a temporary scaffolding from which Faccini plunged to his death.

Of these frescoes in the courtyard of the Castle there are preserved now only the faintest remains of three frescoes showing six noble Estes. Cittadella in the eighteenth century, although lamenting the condition of the frescoes at that time, does give a more complete description of the painting than can be made from the present remains: "Here as in chiaroscuro were painted various compartments divided by colonnades and frames, forming, as it were, many niches in which were painted standing portraits of these illustrious personages much greater than life size, done in a bright bronze color and highlighted with the greatest skill as if gilded statues, arranging two images in each division, and on the pedestals, painted beneath, are depicted their noble arms with the names of the Princes.

In 1641 the engraver Catarino Doino created in honor of the Duke of Modena a series of prints depicting the Estes rulers of Ferrara. According to his preface, Doino requested Antonio Cariola to contribute brief lives of the Estes to accompany the thirteen engravings. Each print is composed of a pair of portraits derived from the frescoes by the Faccini on the Castle at Ferrara. That these engravings are related to the frescoes at Ferrara is proven by the fact that the first print portraying Almerico and Tedaldo, the first and second marquises of Ferrara, resembles very closely the faded remains of the lower right panel still extant on the Castle.

Five years later, when a new edition of Gasparo Sardi's history of Ferrara was brought out, the frescoes again served as a source for another set of engraved portraits of the Este marquises and dukes which faced each chapter in the book. There are eleven of these illustrations containing twenty-two portraits. . . .

There is, however, more evidence for the reconstruction of these genealogical frescoes than just the seventeenth century engravings. In the Ashmolean Museum at Oxford are twenty-four drawings, each showing a pair of members of the Este family. They are full length figures standing before an architectural setting which generally includes columns, doors, and niches. In the niches are often depicted small statues of allegorical figures in classic guise. In addition to the Oxford drawings there are four drawings in the British Museum at London, which belong to the same series, and two privately owned in England.

At Florence in the Gabinetto dei Disegni of the Uffizi there is a drawing of the same nature, but its height probably precludes its belonging to the same series as the English drawings. However, it is certainly a drawing by the same hand and belongs to this project of a series of genealogical portraits of the Este family. . . .

There is no question that these drawings were executed by the sixteenth century Neapolitan artist and archaeologist Pirro Ligorio. . . .

Pirro Ligorio, who was born at Naples in 1513 or 1514, entered the service of Alfonso II d'Este, Duke of Ferrara, on December 1, 1568, as Ducal antiquarian to succeed Enea Vico.

His first contract with the Este family occurred when he was hired by Ippolito II d'Este, the Cardinal of Ferrara and uncle of Duke Alfonso II, as an antiquarian, in 1549. When the Cardinal of Ferrara had to retire to North Italy in 1555 in disfavor with Pope Paul IV, Ligorio soon turned up, in 1557, in the Papal service as Architect of the Vatican, a position which he held also under Pope Pius IV. . . .

Among the drawings by Ligorio of the Este nobles two in the British Museum (nos. 1947-3-5-1 and 1947-3-5-2) correspond to the fragments of fresco preserved on the Este Castle at Ferrara. On the other hand, several of the Oxford and British Museum drawings have also been the source for the engravings by Doyno and the illustrations in Sardi's history of Ferrara. For example, the British Museum drawing (no. 1947-3-5-2) with portraits of Fulco II and Bonfazio IV was used for the Sardi engraving of the Marquises Almerico and Tedaldo.

Ligorio, of course, did not execute the frescoes on the Ferrarese Castle depicting the members of the Este family. The painting itself, as we have seen, was carried out by the Faccini brothers. However, Ligorio must have planned and arranged this series of portraits, and the drawings probably represent the remains of a manuscript, or possibly a scroll, which was presented to the Duke for his approval. It would require a learned man, such as the Duke's antiquarian, to select from Pigna's history of the Estes the personages who were to be depicted and to arrange them, as Ligorio has, in pairs, usually of brothers or father and son. That the historical source for these genealogical portraits of the Estes was the genealogical tree in the history of the family first published at Ferrara in 1570 by the Ducal Secretary G.B. Pigna is proven by the fact that Ligorio specifies a date in relation to an Este noble and notes it is his inscription below the picture only when Pigna does.

Originally there must have been one hundred drawings by Ligorio for the frescoes, since the inscription which formerly stood in the court below the painting specifies that two hundred nobles of the Este family were depicted. There are preserved, therefore, thirty-one of the original drawings, including the Florentine example, but an idea of some of the other portraits is furnished by the engravings. . . with the extant fragments of painting there are preserved at least seventy-two out of the original two hundred portraits.

The Este family of Ferrara had long been interested in the genealogy of their house, and legendary accounts of the origin of the family date back to the Middle Ages. In the thirteenth century Paolo Marro claimed that the Estes were descended from a Trojan prince Martus who attacked Milan.

. . . . In the late Quattrocento the nobility of Ferrara was so interested in French romances, such as TRISTAN and PALAMEDES, that they not only named their children after the heroes and heroines of these romances but desired their own versions of such tales. This is the source of inspiration of the great Ferrarese poems of Boiardo, Ariosto, and Tasso. In all these poems the authors introduce references to the genealogy of the Estes and their most notable deeds. So Boiardo in ORLANDO INNAMORATO specifies his Ruggiero as the ancestor of the Estes, and Ruggiero, in his turn, was descended from Hector of Troy. Later Boiardo describes a loggia decorated with the exploits of four of the Este rulers. Ariosto continues the story begun by Boiardo and in ORLANDO FURIOSO (Canto III) has the magician Merlino summon up for Bradamante the shades of the future nobles of the Este family as Vergil reveals in the AENEID the descent of Augustus from Aeneas. Finally Tasso has the wizard in GERUSALEMME LIBERATA (Canto XVII) point out to Rinaldo his Este ancestry back to the Roman Caius Atius as it was depicted on a wondrous shield.

In the mid sixteenth century the Ducal secretary of Ercole II d'Este, Cinzio Giraldi, out of deference to his master, expanded the legendary genealogy of the Estes to include the ancient hero Hercules as ancestor of the family. Giraldi in his commentary on Ferrara and the Estes recounts the older legends of descent from the Trojan Antenor and even the Biblical Noah, but then he adds: "I can scarcely be persuaded that it (the Este race) had its origin from the ordinary beginnings of mortals. . . . Wherefore I come generally to the conclusion that I believe that the Este race (which we have developed more fully in Lydian meter in our Hercule) is descended from ancient Hercules. . . .

Hence I have always considered those who taught that the Este princes received their origin from the most noble family of Gauls much more correct than others thought, for I know that the ancient Hercules whom we believe to be the author of this race, having conquered Gervon and overcome the Pyrenees, proceeded into Gaul. There he married Galata, daughter of the King of the Celts. . . . By her, Hercules had a son Galatis who, when he succeeded his grandfather in the kingdom (for Hercules went down into Italy from Gaul) wished the Celts to be called Gauls (Gallos) by the addition of the letter L to his name. I would believe that the royal families of Gaul come from his progeny.

Thence, I cannot deny, just as water comes together in a stream from a spring, comes this very noble Este family, which now among the others of Italy, however illustrious, occupies a princely rank, and I must agree with those who testify that this outstanding family has risen from the most illustrious nobility of the Gauls. But if this which is repeated above should seem much too much to some, I ask that this indulgence be given me, and I ask them to be no less fair to me, because I carry the origin of this famous family back to Hercules, than Roman antiquity was to Livy, since he testified that Mars was the progenitor of the family of Romulus, founder of the Roman Empire."

The ducal secretary of Alfonso II d'Este, G.B. Pigna, then published in 1570 his history of the Estes in which he mentions only briefly that the Estes were descended from the Trojans. Pigna, however, by means of a genealogical tree added to his book, as well as by the text, works out in an historical manner the continuous descent of the Estes from the Roman Caius Atius. This desire to prove their Roman ancestry provokes the Estes' great desire to collect and own all ancient Roman inscriptions, and some forgeries, which mention the family of Atius, since it was common belief that the name Este was derived from Atius.

As has been noted, Pigna's history is the source for Ligorio's genealogical drawings, but these drawings and frescoes derived from them are not the only example in the pictorial arts of the Este interest in their genealogy. Cinzio Giraldi relates that the painter Girolamo da Carpi painted for Ercole II a series of portraits of the Este rulers of Ferrara, commencing with Azzo IV, on the royal palace at Copparo. These paintings which were destroyed in 1808, were probably executed sometime between 1542 and about 1547. The dates of these two sets of genealogical portraits, one in the forties, the other in the seventies, correspond to one of the most troublesome political problems - although they had many - which bothered the Ferrarese rulers during the sixteenth century. This was the question of order of precedence particularly with the Medici rulers of Florence at the Papal, Imperial, and various royal courts of Europe. . . . In the controversy regarding precedence the principal argument used by the Estes and feared by the Medici was the continuous lineage of the Estes as rulers of Ferrara and their earlier attainment than the Medici to the rank of Duke. It was on "the antiquity of family, the antiquity of the rank of Duke, the antiquity (as Santi reports) of the city of Ferrara, the nobility of the many great German houses related with that of the Este, and the antiquity of the states dependent and subject" to Alfonso II that the Estes rested their case. Venceslao Santi has already shown how this quarrel regarding precedence was the motivating force for the numerous histories of Ferrara and of the Estes which appeared in the sixteenth century, and that it was particularly Pigna's history, published in 1570, which was the official Ferrarese instrument of propaganda for their cause. Actually Pigna's book was based upon the preliminary work of Girolamo Faletti, the Ferrarese ambassador at Venice, who died in 1564, Faletti had also begun a genealogical tree of the Estes which was completed by Pigna and published in 1565 in an engraving by Enea Vico. Pigna also relates that there was a decoration in the Ducal museum at Ferrara a large genealogical tree based upon the investigations of the earlier Ferrarese historian Alessandro Sardi on which were listed "those families of German princes, and the other nobles which there have been from the Roman republic until now." Not only were the diplomats, lawyers, and historians involved in the dispute but, as Santi notes, "as Pigna is the historian of the controversy, Tasso is the poet." Tasso's genealogical shield in the GERULSALEMNE LIBERATA is based upon the research of historians such as Alessandro and Gasparo Sardi, Cinzio Giraldi, and Faletti. In fact, after Pigna's death in 1575 Tasso attempted to succeed him as historian of the Estes. Although unsuccessful in this, the poet later wrote a dialogue, unpublished until the nineteenth century, entitled DELLA PRECEDENZA. Tasso's epic GERULSALEMNE is not his only poetry concerned with praise of the antiquity and nobility of the Estes, for the poet wrote two sonnets upon the genealogical paintings by the Faccini in the courtyard at Ferrara, and on December 10, 1581, Tasso wrote. . . "I am thinking of making a small poem about each of the princes of the House of Este, who is depicted in the courtyard; I should like it, therefore, if you could send me the tree of the House and the History of Pigna which is among my other books . . ."

The argument between the Medici and the Estes, although it ended in a rejection of the Ferrarese claims, influenced greatly, as Santi explains, the history of Europe during the late sixteenth century, the writing of history, and the study of genealogy. . . .

CASTELLO ESTENSE, TIVOLI, ITALY

Sallie Estes Seltzer supplied this data on the Este Castle in Ferrara, from GREAT HOUSES OF ITALY, by the Editors of REALITES, p. 264:

CASTELLO ESTENSE In 1385, after an uprising caused by fiscal problems, Niccolo II d'Este decided to erect a fortress which would enable him to dominate Ferrara and impose his will on the populace. Construction was entrusted to the famous military engineer Bartolino Ploti. Work progressed rapidly and at the close of the fourteenth century the Castello was more or less as we see it today. Four main buildings frame a courtyard with a heavy square tower at each angle. One of these, known as the "lion tower," dates from before the castle and was once part of the Gate of the Lions in the city's ramparts. The Castello was modified in the sixteenth century after a fire in 1554 which destroyed its upper sections. The four main buildings were then raised a story under the direction of Gerolamo Carpi, and a marble balustrade replaced the original crenels (1) above the machicolation (2). It was then also that the towers were crowned with pavilions adorned with pilasters and niches. Finally, in 1570, Alfonso II topped these pavilions with small lantern-turrets designed by Alberto Schiatti.

VILLA D'ESTE: HISTORIC SITE, TIVOLI, ITALY

The ruins of the original Villa d'Este, a home much connected with the Este Family, are described in GREAT HOUSES OF ITALY, by The Editors of REALITES, pp. 205, 206. Sallie Estes Seltzer supplied this information from her research on the subject.

VILLA D'ESTE Born in 1590, Ippolito d'Este was the son of Lucrezia Borgia (daughter of Pope Alexander VI) and Alfonso I, Duke of Ferrara. At the age of ten he was named archbishop of Milan and was made a cardinal at thirty. So precocious a career naturally led him to try to obtain the pontifical tiara. His ambition was unsuccessful, however, and as a consolation Pope Julius III appointed him governor of Tivoli in 1550.

The cardinal lost no time in commissioning the Neopolitan architect Pirro Ligorio to design a villa and lay out a garden. Five years were needed merely to arrange the site. In 1555 the election of the reformist Pope Paul VI obliged the cardinal to leave Rome and retire to Ferrara, but work on the villa was resumed on the death of the Pope in 1559. The villa was decorated by an entire team of artists headed by Federigo Zuccherò, Livio Agresti and Girolamo Muziano. In 1572, when the cardinal died, work stopped, although both the villa and the garden were almost finished. Montaigne, who visited Tivoli on April 3, 1581, stated: "Here we can see the famous palace and garden of the cardinal of Ferrara. It is very handsome design but imperfect in several sections and the work is not being continued by the present cardinal." He admired the fountains and "this spouting of an infinite number of sprays controlled and hurled forth by a single spring, which can be moved from a great distance."

Cardinal Ippolito had left the villa to the cardinals of his family or, if there were none, to the College of Cardinals. His nephews, Luigi and Alessandro, thus succeeded him at Tivoli. When the latter died in 1624, the d'Este, now dukes of Modena, asked Pope Urban VIII to annul the will and give them the domain, and their request was granted. From that time on the villa was no longer inhabited and the gardens were left in a state of abandonment. During his journey to Italy, Fragonard was touched by their untended beauty and made a number of drawings. At the close of the eighteenth century, on the death of the last Duke of Modena of the House of d'Este, Tivoli passed into the hands of Ferdinand Hapsburg, husband of Maria Beatrice d'Este. In 1866 the villa was given to the Cardinal of Hohenlohe, Grand Chaplain of the Vatican an important prelate who, on the eve of the Vatican Council, had dared express his hostility to the definition of the dogma of Pontifical Infallibility.

The Cardinal of Hohenlohe spent only a short time at Tivoli. But it was thanks to him that the villa enjoyed the presence of its most famous guest, Franz Liszt. In 1868 the cardinal had offered the pianist-composer, on whom he had conferred minor orders three years earlier, the use of a small apartment consisting of four rooms overlooking the gardens. Liszt made short visits, staying at the villa when he was in Rome before journeying on to Weimar or Budapest. He would stroll among the fountains, tossing the children small coins which his servant laid out for him for this purpose every morning. He immortalized the site in two piano compositions "To the Cypresses of the Villa D'Este" and "The Fountains of the Villa D'Este."

VILLA D'ESTE: LUXURY HOTEL, LAKE COMO, ITALY

The famous Villa D'Este in Italy has been thought by some to have a direct connection with our Este Family ancestors in Italy. A letter from the present owner of this luxury hotel explains that this is an erroneous assumption.

VILLA D'ESTE - 1873-1973, Cernobio - Lago Di Como - Italia
August 20th, 1977.

Dear Mrs. Seltzer:

Thank you very much for your most interesting letter of July 28th which was just received.

Before going into any detailed explanation of what can be done here we feel we must forewarn you that our Hotel has never had any connection whatever with the Este family; the name stems from a whim of Caroline of Brunswick, wife of King George the 4th, who was once the owner of the estate. Also Caroline bore no connection with the d'Este family.

A DUKE OF FERRARA AS PORTRAYED BY BROWNING

Browning's first trip to Italy, in 1834, inspired him to write the following monologue. The speaker, an unnamed Duke of Ferrara, personifies some of the hardness and cruelty of the Renaissance. His listener is an intermediary sent by the father of his bride-to-be. The portrait is of his late wife, whom he just had quietly murdered.

Many scholars identify Nicola III d'Este (1384-1441) as the duke and Parisinia as the late wife. Others believe the duke is Alfonso d'Este and the bride-to-be is Lucrezia Borgia (1480-1519), natural daughter of Pope Alexander VI.

MY LAST DUCHESS

That's my last Duchess painted on the wall,
Looking as if she were alive. I call
That piece a wonder, now: Fra Pandolf's hands
Worked busily a day, and there she stands.
Will't please you sit and look at her? I said
"Fra Pandolf" by design, for never read
Strangers like you that pictured countenance,

The depth and passion of its earnest glance,
But to myself they turned (since none puts by The curtain I have drawn for you, but I)
And seemed as they would ask me, if they durst,
How such a glance came there; so, not the first
Are you to turn and ask thus. Sir, 't was not
Her husband's presence only, called that spot
Of joy into the duchess' cheek: perhaps
Fra Pandolf chanced to say "Her mantle laps
Over my lady's wrist too much," or "Paint
Must never hope to reproduce the faint
Half-flush that dies along her throat"; such stuff
Was courtesy, she thought, and cause enough
For calling up that spot of joy. She had
A heart -- how shall I say? -- too soon made glad,
Too easily impressed; she liked whate'er
She looked on, and her looks went everywhere.
Sir, 't was all one! My favor at her breast,
The dropping of the daylight in the West,
The bough of cherries some officious fool
Broke in the orchard for her, the white mule
She rode with round the terrace -- all and each
Would draw from her alike the approving speech,
Or blush, at least. She thanked men, -- good! but thanked Somehow -- I know not how -- as if she ranked
My gift of a nine-hundred-years-old name
With anybody's gift. Who'd stoop to blame
This sort of trifling? Even had you skill
In speech -- (which I have not) -- to make your will Quite clear to such an one, and say, "Just this Or that in you disgusts me; here you miss,
Or there exceed the mark" -- and if she let Herself be lessened so, nor plainly set
Her wits to yours, forsooth, and made excuse,
-- E'en then would be some stooping; and I choose Never to stoop. Oh, sir, she smiled, no doubt, Whene'er I passed her; but who passed without Much the same smile? This grew; I gave commands;
Then all smiles stopped together. There she stands
As if alive. Will 't please you rise? We'll meet
The company below, then. I repeat,
The count your master's known munificence
Is ample warrant that no just pretence
Of mine for dowry will be disallowed;
Though his fair daughter's self, as I avowed
At starting, is my object. Nay, we'll go

Together down, sir! Notice Neptune, though,
Taming a sea-horse, thought a rarity,
Which Claus of Innsbruck cast in bronze for me!

Robert Browning

To get a feeling for what it was like to live in that primitive, precarious time, read the best-selling history, A DISTANT MIRROR by Barbara Tuchman. You might also check Machiavelli's THE PRINCE. He develops his theory of the ideal ruler, based on the career of Lucrezia's brother, Cesare Borgia, a man who did not allow any moral qualms to interfere with his ambition. This 16th century prince became a sort of model for twentieth century power politics.

Another interesting, though not particularly accurate account of this family and period, is the first volume of Alexander Dumas' CELEBRATED CRIMES. This sensationalized account, with lurid tales of murder and lust, gave Lucrezia Borgia the reputation that has survived to the present day in popular legend.

Lucrezia does not deserve this reputation, according to some scholars. Her life with Alfonso was a tranquil one. She was devoted to her children, and was charitable to the people of Ferrara, and the Court of Ferrara encouraged all the arts. She and Alfonso patronized poets, painters and humanists, among whom were the poet Ariosto and the painter Titian. Lucrezia and Alfonso had seven children, of whom four lived to adulthood: Ercole II, Ippolito, Leonora, and Francesco.

VERSES ABOUT ALFONSO AND LUCREZIA BORGIA ESTE, DUKE AND DUCHESS OF FERRARA

Supplied by Sallie Estes Seltzer, the first of these poems is an example of the work of poets hired by the Este Family to sing their praises. This one was about their home, Castello Estense. The second poem, an inscription in that castle, tells something of the history of two Este women.

All things change. Ferrara which of old, girt round by lowly walls, on one side of the green river bank, on the other the marshy lagoon, in poverty held but slender resources, narrow houses and narrow temples of the Gods. . . . now stands out among the neighboring cities as much as Father Appennine among the vine-clad hills, or the Po among the rivers.

Ariosto, Epithalamium for the marriage of Alfonso d'Este and Lucrezia Borgia

Qui Parisina fu portata alla morte
Qui Volse i chiari occhi ridenti
Lucrezia Borgia regina di eleganze

(Here Parisina was put to death
 Here were turned the clear and laughing eyes
 Of Lucrezia Borgia, queen of elegance)

THE ESTES FAMILY IN AMERICA

The American segment of the "Estes Family History, Legends and Documents" follows the chronological order of the "Estes Listings". It starts with two newspaper articles about Abraham (3) Estes' descendants. The first item consists of excerpts from the obituary of one of his progeny, Henry H. Estes, who was the epitome of the rugged, intelligent, Christian, Estes pioneer who blazed West from Virginia. The second item is an autobiographical sketch by Bartley (5) Estes (spelled "Bartlett" in the Listings) which capsulizes some of the history of his family branch.

Data about some of Elisha (3) Estes' descendants is copied from the family Bible of Lucie Gwynne Estes, of Lovingsston, Va.

From a weekly historical publication in Tennessee is excerpted the story of the first Estes of Haywood County, Tennessee, and their descendants. It tells of how Joel was the "Johnny Appleseed" of the Tennessee cedar trees, bringing cedar saplings from Virginia to Haywood County, and provides history of other community leaders of Durhamville, also "kin" to the Estes: the Rices, the Folkesses, and the Picketts.

Capt. Joel (4) Estes ran against Davy Crockett for the Tennessee State Legislature and was defeated. Excerpts from a book about early Tennessee history tells how he handled his campaign and quotes a letter from one of his supporters after the election.

Documentary material proving the descent of all Joel (4) Estes' family from Miles, the original Cary immigrant, is included. These documents are supplemental to those that appear in the CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY. Cary documents appear in "Cary History and Legends" in this volume. These documents are valuable to all in this family line as proof of generations for membership in patriotic organizations through both Estes and Cary ancestors, such as Benjamin (3) Estes, our Revolutionary ancestor.

Historic Estes homes are described in a Dyersburg, Tennessee, newspaper report about an annual "pilgrimage" to historic sites. We visit the replica of "Estes Hall", Joel Estes' home, and "Oaklawn", home of Joel's grandson, Dr. Louis Powhatan Estes. These brief vignettes give something of the history surrounding the homes and the names of the present owners.

A family legend is told in the words of the matriarch of the Tennessee Estes, Aunt Sallie (Mrs. Albert Monroe Estes, Jr.) It concerns gold, buried during the Civil War, which to this day has never been found.

The origin of the naming of Estes Road in Nashville, Tennessee, and the information that "Grayswood", home of co-author of the CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY, Patrick Mann Estes' estate is now a private school, are revealed in letters.

From a presentday namesake of "Moreau Pinckney Estes" we learn the legend of how Joel Estes' son was given that name. Data from an encyclopedia gives credence to this story.

We include the wills of the last two sons of Abraham (1) covered in this book: Robert (2) and Elisha (2), and then conclude this section with some lists: (1) male members of the Estes family for whom there are marriage records for the years 1746 (the year Lunenburg County was formed from Brunswick County) to 1853; (2) the Grantors Index, Estes documents recorded in the various deed books; and (3) wills and estates for the Lunenburg Co. wills and estates for the years 1746-1900 from Circuit Court of Lunenburg Co., Va.

At the very end we record a bit of trivia, including a list of towns in the U.S. named "Estes."

HENRY H. ESTES

Henry H. Estes typifies the pioneer stock of our Estes ancestors. James Bartlett (9) Estes, of Kansas City, Mo., supplied this newspaper item:

From THE LIBERTY TRIBUNE, Liberty, Mo., Friday, Sept. 18, 1868:
Death of Henry H. Estes, Esq.

"Old Uncle Henry Estes died today" -- such were the brief, yet suggestive words that were spoken to the people of this County on the 8th inst. Of a purer, truer, or more honest man, that announcement is seldom, or never, made. Such men should not pass away unnoticed.

Mr. Estes was born in the State of Virginia on the 11th of May 1788. and had, therefore, at the time of his death, "by reason of strength," seen the suns of fourscore summers. He was a not unworthy son of that grand Virginian stock of men of whom it is but simple justice to say that they are chivalric as Bayard, as the Douglas, tender and true, and brave as imperial Caesar. He was also of that pioneer race of Virginians who have subdued the wilderness from the banks of the James to the waters of the Missouri, and gemmed the broad land with towns and cities.

Mr. Estes accompanied his father from Virginia to Madison Co., Ky., in the year 1792, where he remained until 1816, when he removed to that part of Missouri, now known as Howard Co., whence in 1817 he passed over into Saline Co., and finally in 1819 settled in Clay Co., and here continued to reside until his death. In 1811, Mr. Estes joined the Old Baptist Church -- a community which embraces within its fold so many men of distinguished piety, -- and continued a consistent, earnest and devoted member of the same during the remainder of his life... He was one of the first white men who made their homes in this County... In 1824, he was one of the Commissioners who located the town of Liberty. During all the years since those early days, his life has been one of activity and usefulness, and at the service of his friends and the public. He was, indeed, one of the patriarchs of the land, and a noble specimen of those hardy, self-denying, adventurous men who, at an early day, cut loose from civilization, and bravely pushing into the gloomy depths of the forest, cleared up and made beautiful the country we now enjoy. A conversation with Mr. Estes was always pleasant; it carried the mind back to the fresh and virginal days of Missouri. It caused one, in imagination, to see our fathers painfully tracing their way Westward, slowly felling the mighty oaks, and toiling on their little cleared patches of ground. You could observe the small openings in the woods expand into fields, -- residences succeed the stockade forts, -- and villages take the places of Indian lodges...

No man ever passed through a long life of activity and intercourse with the world and preserved a more spotless reputation than Mr. Estes. He was of unsullied private character -- pure morals -- strict integrity -- and undoubted veracity... All his ways were those of peace and justice. He was a sincere, practical Christian, not relying on precept only, but teaching by example also. Mr. Estes was remarkable for his modesty, gentleness, and reverence for holy things. During the trying scenes of the war, no marauder dared to harm the venerable man: his age, his piety, his high reputation for honor and truth were to him as a shield, both day and night...

BARTLETT (or BARTLEY) (5) ESTES

The following autobiographical sketch is from a Clay Co., Mo., newspaper. The name and date of the paper are unknown. James Bartlett (9) Estes, of Kansas City, Mo., supplied this item.

I was born in Fayette County, Kentucky, on the 31st day of March, 1795. [NB -- listings say "1794"] My father was a native of Spottsylvania County, Virginia, and settled in Kentucky at a very early day. My father and my two paternal uncles were soldiers in the Continental Army during the Revolutionary War. One of my uncles was wounded in seven different parts of his body in one battle. I had two brothers in the War of 1812, and both were in the battle of the River Raisin and there taken prisoners. They escaped the tomahawks of the Indians. -- One was subsequently in the battle of the Thames. I came to Clay County, Missouri, about 40 years ago; and have lived here ever since. I have been a Free-Mason more than 40 years. I have always been a whig and am disfranchised. Don't know why I am disfranchised.

BENJAMIN (3) ESTES FAMILY

THE EARLY TENNESSEE ESTES

Excerpts from the TENNESSEE HISTORICAL CHRONICLE, Week of March 28, 1977. (Permission to reprint here granted by Waggener-Walker Newspapers, Columbia, Ky.)

FOUNDED OVER 110 YEARS AGO; NAMED AFTER THOMAS DURHAM
By Frank Greaves (1933)

One hundred and ten years ago Durhamville was founded and named after Col. Thomas Durham. Today the descendants of this man remain on the scene of that precinct's early activities. At the same time others settled in that section all of whom were remarkably distinguished for their patriotism and thrift....

Another pioneer family was Rice. This family's progenitors came to Orysa in 1832 from Marion District, S.C. Another remarkable family is that of Estes, descendants of Joel H. Estes, who first came to the Orysa settlement prior to 1823 to survey out the goodness of this new land. But it began to rain near the date of his arrival and rained 40 days and 40 nights, whereupon he returned disgusted to Virginia. However, the weather changed and in 1823 he returned and settled where his descendants now reside - at Orysa....

As the years passed, the Orysa community, where the Estes, Pickett and Rice families lived, instituted the Hatchie Academy. The first teacher was Prof. Case then Cook, then C.A. Folk, and then Mrs. Lee, of Fulton. Mrs. Lee, as were all was a highly educated woman and her memory is affectionately treasured in that community today.

Certainly there were and are other distinguished families connected with these communities, but those named seem to be the founders, and it is remarkable that the descendants of these families have so long remained in one community as they have. They have the soil endeared by the memories of a century which has left the scars of battle with the monuments of love. Perhaps their affection for nature and desires to treasure its gift is expressed as well by an act of Joel Estes, the pioneer, as any other.

When he returned from Virginia in 1823 he brought a bundle of young cedar trees; tied them on his saddle, kept them protected and planted them at Orysa. These grew, bore seed, which the birds scattered about the country, until this section, wherein the cedar was not found, became beautified. So, perhaps, this tree which crowned the mountains of Virginia, became an ornament to the Western Valleys of Tennessee.

I saw him last at his post of duty with the frosts of 80 years upon his brow, a belligerent majority, but with walking cane raised, he thundered in the ears of his enemies: "When I am no longer here, you will have cause to remember me and what I say today, and that is, the power to tax is the power to destroy, and every bond you issue robs the future, increases the tax, and when injudiciously voted, destroys the government."

A few days ago I was listening to a heated debate over in Haywood county in that same courtroom. It was easy to recall the figure of the old judge, though, his spirit lips were dumb; easy to imagine his position, but the warrior of Orysa was no more.

But there arose another Orysa man and he, too, was an Estes. He, too, had something of the fire of battle in his eye. He, too, carried his point. I am wondering if the son is destined to take the lists against the field and call back the ghost of him who so often fought the battles of the forgotten man. Only the future can tell, But, this young Esquire Estes has that old idealism which has lighted the altars of the Orysa people since Joel Estes sat up his domicile under Virginia cedars.

Now and then we see - but seldom - communities like Durhamville and Orysa, where the glory of the place is not in piles of brick and parks and show, but is in the people; for they have what money cannot purchase - that spirit which comes partly from training, partly from heritage, and partly from God. It is the spirit of the ideal, the sinew of justice, the gospel of fair dealing.

Another thing about these two communities is the fact that these people have adhered to the ancient ideals of life and government. Above the dollar mark they have written the word "justice" and obeyed every splendid rule that goes into the making of that word. It was instilled into them by old men whose forebears fled hither with English dissenters, - French Huguenots, Italian nobility - in search for that dominion consecrated to the rights of man. Wars have come and passed and each has paid tribute from his fireside. Civic differences have arisen in the sister counties - and they have stood sometimes with the minority - but always unflinching, always advocates of the original principles of government.

Every community in Haywood county owes a debt of gratitude to Esq. J.H. Estes, deceased. A member of the county court, he never failed to attend if possible. During his feeblest years he would drive 20 miles through mud and snow, in the midst of winter, to stand - sometimes alone - in the midst of the court of justices to plead for the economy in expenditures and justice to the farmers. No political clique could claim him, no gesture of power awe, no flattery hush the fearless voice of the grand old gentleman who was too white and clean to obey the orders of those who sought to intimidate him.

JOEL (4) ESTES

From REMINISCENCES OF OLD TIMES IN WEST TENNESSEE by Joseph S. Williams:

Captain Joel Estes, a worthy and highly respectable citizen, north of Big Hatchie in Haywood, was a candidate [for the Tennessee State Legislature against Davy Crockett] The Captain was among the earliest emigrant settlers in the Big Hatchie country, a native of "the Mother of Presidents" in old times, and, withall, a gentleman of more than ordinary ability. He sought to reach the hearts and minds of the voters of the district by addressing them through a lengthy circular, instead of taking the field and stump. [Davy Crockett did take to the stump, and then, of course, eventually got elected to the U.S. Congress]...

In justice to the memory of Captain Joel Estes, who was perhaps the most intellectual of the candidates in the field, it may not be inappropriate as a part of the history of the times, to allow a place in these pages for the following, taken from the Jackson GAZETTE, a newspaper then published in Jackson, Madison county, by Colonel D.C. McLean. It appeared in the issue of that paper of the 15th of August, 1829. The election having been held on the first Monday of the same month.

"Mr. Editor: As the election is now over, perhaps it would not be amiss, nay, justice, to say what was the cause of Captain Estes not holding a better poll. A great excitement having been raised among the people by the friends of the two great political champions of the West, Colonels Crockett and Alexander, that a correct, mild and independent political course was swallowed up in the vortex of ambitious buzzing. It is to be hoped that the time is not far distant when this electioneering mania will cease, and true merit, untrameled by party spirit, will assume her dignity of character.

[Signed] "A Voter."

HISTORIC ESTES HOMES

Descriptions and history of historic Estes homes are excerpted here from an article in the STATE GAZETTE, Dyersburg, Tenn., of Fri., Oct. 10, 1975, concerning a "Pilgrimage to these and other West Tennessee landmarks sponsored by the Lauderdale County Academy, Oct. 11 and 12 that year. (Permission granted for reprint here):

ESTES HALL: The home of Mr. and Mrs. E.L. Johnson, was built in 1913 and is a replica of the original Estes Hall, which was destroyed by fire. Built by Captain Joel Estes, a pioneer from Spotsylvania County, Va., in the year 1825*; the house is of Early American architecture. The heavy doors of the entrance hall, the mantle over the fireplace in the hall and west bedroom are part of the original building. One of the interesting features is the beautiful stairway leading to the upper floor broken by a restful landing beneath large double windows.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have recently made extensive improvements to be seen in the spacious den and the large master bedroom with adjacent bath. The house has been carpeted throughout and has a very modern kitchen and breakfast room.

OAKLAWN: The home of Mr. and Mrs. Warner M. Estes and Mrs. L. B. Estes has been in the Estes family since 1803 and was built on land that was a part of the original 5,000 acre tract granted to the Estes family from the North Carolina Territory. The house was started during the Civil War in 1865, but was not completed till 1868.

The lumber is of yellow poplar and the bricks were made on the farm. The sides are hand hewn and pegged together. Square nails were also used. Many of the window panes are poured glass instead of rolled glass of today. Several pieces of furniture were brought to the home by Dr. Lewis Powhatan Estes and his bride. A pier mirror and bookcases are from the old Wesleyan Female College in Brownsville, where Mrs. L.B. Estes' grandfather was the founder and principal. Three generations of Estes have lived in the home.

THE STORY OF THE "BURIED GOLD"

A story about her great-grandfather, Albert Monroe Estes, as told to Helen Estes Seltzer by her Aunt Sallie (Mrs. Albert Monroe Estes, Jr.) in Ripley, Tenn., Aug. 17, 1977, during the Estes Family Reunion:

THE STORY OF THE "BURIED GOLD"

"Well, the way they told it to me was my grandfather, when he gathered his cotton crop, he got on the boat to take it to New Orleans. That was the only market they had and he went down. Didn't have a Memphis market - it was a small place.

"So, when he came back he had a high fever and was delirious and he came back home on the river boat and when he got home he kept trying to tell them something and they never found the money and it was during the War and they figured that he had buried it. So many people were burying their fine silver and their money and everything else to keep the Yankees from finding it, and so they thought he must have buried it because they never found the money (from the cotton sale).

"So, after his death - he died before he could tell them anything about what happened to the money - but after his death people thought it was buried and they just dug and dug all over the place for that gold, but it has never been found.

"And we don't know that it was buried at all. It could have been that somebody robbed him coming back because the river traffic was very wild at that time."

Q. "Do you know the exact year this happened?"

A. "He died the last year of the Civil War."

Q. "How long before that was he ill?"

A. "He died just a few days - of pneumonia - after he came home from New Orleans. The Civil War was just finishing up - 1865.

ESTES ROAD

There is an "Estes Road" in Nashville, Tenn., named for Patrick Mann Estes, co-author of the CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY. Will P. Kirkman, husband of the late Elizabeth Warner Estes Kirkman, Patrick Mann Estes' daughter, provided this explanation:

As to Estes Road, it was named for her [Elizabeth's] father, Mr. P.M. Estes. It was built in part along one side of his home place ["Grayswood"], in the thirties by WPA workers. The man in charge of the roads at that time was a good friend of Mr. Estes, and this, I expect, was a good contributing fact. Not a very interesting reason, but a good name.

"GRAYSWOOD"

This former estate of Patrick Mann Estes, mentioned above, is now a private school, "Harpeth Hall", successor to "Ward Belmont", according to a letter from William Gates Ambrose, whose family married into the Estes: Belle Gates married Albert Monroe (6) Estes. William Ambrose is not an Estes, being descended from Belle's sister, Lena.

MOREAU PINCKNEY ESTES' NAME

Moreau Pinckney (8) Estes, IV, gave this telephone account of a family story passed down through the years about how the first Moreau Pinckney Estes was so named:

The "Moreau" is for a French General, a close friend of great-great-grandfather, Capt. (War of 1812) Joel Estes. General Moreau was one of a group of Napoleon's generals who had plotted against him. All the other generals were put to death by Napoleon, but because of his friendship for him, Napoleon spared Moreau's life and exiled him to America, where he met and became a close friend of ancestor, Joel Estes.

In checking the Columbia Encyclopedia, Second Edition, Columbia University Press, N.Y., 1960, on p. 1321 we find this account about General Moreau which coincides with the family story above. (Permission granted for reprint here).

Moreau, Jean Victor (1763-1813). French general in the French Revolutionary Wars. . . . At the conclusion of the war Moreau began to oppose Bonaparte, and his name rallied republican sentiment. Informed of the royalist Cadoudal plot, he neither joined nor revealed it; after its discovery he was arrested and sentenced to imprisonment for two years. The sentence was commuted to exile which he spent in Spain and America. . . .

"Pinckney" was said to be drived from another close friend of Joel Estes, and he was thought to have been one of the South Carolina Pinckneys, but his exact identification has never been established.

In checking the Columbia Encyclopedia, as above, we found three Pinckneys covered on p. 1548, of whom the most likely candidate is Thomas (1750-1828), a major general in the War of 1812, who distinguished himself at Horseshoe Bend. (As mentioned earlier, Joel Estes was a captain in the War of 1812.)

ROBERT (2) ESTES

The Will of Robert (2) Estes is on file at the Lunenburg County Circuit Court in Virginia (Will Book 2, pages 417-419. The Will itself shows the name as "Estos", but other records in the office show Robert's name as "Estes", according to W.R. Moore, clerk and Grace T. Marshall, deputy clerk of the court.

Item one equal part of my said negroes and money I give to my son Benjamins wife and children in the same manner as that given to my son Georges wife and

Estes Connections

The following "Family Connections" evolved from the wealth of genealogical information received on past generations of those who married into the Estes family. They represent the work of dedicated genealogists (every family is said to have at least one) and include so many distinguished and interesting ancestors, we decided to include this sampling. Perhaps this information will spark your interest in further researching other family branches -- a never-ending and intriguing venture.

In each case the name of the Estes is given first, then "married", then the name of the connecting spouse in capitals.

Elisha Estes' son, Christopher Tompkins (4) Estes, had a daughter, Lucy Gwynne (5) Estes, whose daughter married David Halbert Howard. Their daughter, Lucie (7) Howard, married John Otey Carter, of Look-out Mt., Tenn. Lucie Howard supplied the following material on Elisha Estes family connections.

CONNECTIONS WITH THE BENJAMIN (3) ESTES BRANCH

Benjamin (3) Estes married CECELIA REBECCA THORPE, who was the daughter of SARAH TRIPLETT, daughter of William Triplett, a close friend of George Washington.

The following information comes from Wm. and Mary Quarterly, by Rev. Arnold Hord, Vol. 21(1) 33-43; 115-134; Vol. 22 (1) 175-181:

THE TRIPLETT FAMILY

FIRST GENERATION

FRANCIS TRIPLETT. He patented 1,050 acres of land in Old Rappahannock county in 1666 ("Virginia County Records," Vol. VI, page 194, By Crozier). He is mentioned in Deeds (see Virginia Magazine, Vol. XVII, page 144). His will is dated Nov. 20th, 1700, and was proved in Richmond county, March 4th, 1701. He mentions his children and grandchildren, disposes of the plantation on which he lived, containing 200 acres, another tract of 1,050 acres, and several smaller tracts. He mentions his wife, Abigail.

SECOND GENERATION

THOMAS (2) TRIPLETT (Francis (1) was dead at the time when his father's will was made, but he is called in the will "eldest son." The names of his children mentioned in the will are Thomas and Francis.

THIRD GENERATION

FRANCIS (3) TRIPLETT (Thomas (2), Francis (1)) was a voter in Prince William Co. in 1741 and when Fairfax Co. was taken out of Prince William Co., he was a resident and voter of Fairfax Co. in 1744 (Gleanings of Va. History by Boogher, pg. 118, 119.) The will of Francis Triplett, dated Oct. 14th, 1757 was proved in Fairfax Co., Nov. 22nd, 1758. He mentions his wife Elizabeth and Children and grandchildren. His inventory is dated Feb. 18th, 1759, Will Book B, pg. 204, Fairfax Co.

FOURTH GENERATION

THOMAS (4) TRIPLETT (FRANCIS (3), THOMAS (2), FRANCIS (1)) was a resident of Truro Parish, Fairfax, County. He was a Vestryman of Truro Parish 1776-85; Church Warden 1777-78 and was one of the original pew holders of old Pohick Church ("History of Truro Parish" by Slaughter and Goodwin, pages 122, 118, 119). He was a friend of General George Washington and "Mr. Triplett and family" were among the friends especially invited to the funeral of the General by Mrs. Washington (See Spark's "Life of Washington" appendix). He reconstructed from the old house at Mt. Vernon the mansion that is still standing ("Letters to Washington edited by Hamilton," Vol. 2, page 387; Vol. 3, page 3, 28, 75, 76, 101). He married Sarah, daughter of Dade Massey. She was a descendant of Col. Gerald Fowke and other well known Virginia families. (Hayden's "Virginia Genealogies" page 157).

Benjamin(3) Estes' marriage to CECELIA REBECCA THORPE also connects all Benjamin's descendants to GERARD (or GERALD) FOWKE, III, builder of Gunston Hall, in Lorton, Va., and cousin to the Masons of Va., whose most illustrious member, George Mason, wrote the Bill of Rights. (There is also a line of the Moore Family [Yates] which traces back to George Mason's family). Gunston Hall was the home of George Mason. It is still extant and is open to the public.

Benjamin (3) Estes had a son, Benjamin (4), whose grand-daughter, Emma (6) Estes Cobb, of Chapel Hill, N.C., supplied this material on the direct lines from Cecelia Rebecca Thorpe to GERARD FOWKE, ADAM THOROUGHGOOD and SIR EDWARD OSBORNE:

GERARD FOWKE

Cecilia (Selah) Thorpe was the daughter of Thomas Thorpe and Sarah Triplett. Sarah Triplett was the daughter of William Triplett and Sarah Massey. Sarah Massey was the daughter of Dade Massey and Parthenia Alexander. Parthenia Alexander was the daughter of Robert Alexander and Anne Fowke. Anne Fowke was the daughter of Gerard Fowke, III, and Sarah Burdette (2nd wife).

Gerard Fowke, III, connects Benjamin (3) Estes' descendants back to GERARD FOWKE, I, member of the House of Burgesses from Westmoreland Co., Va. (1663), and a member of the Maryland Assembly from Charles Co., Md. (1665); to ROGER FOWKE, of Straffordshire, England; to ADAM THOROUGHGOOD, Commissioner and Burgess for Elizabeth City Co., Va. (1629-30); to SIR EDWARD OSBORNE, Lord Mayor of London (1585); and to SIR WILLIAM HEWETT, also a Lord Mayor of London (1559).

Gerard Fowke III, was the son of Col. Gerard Fowke, II, and Anne Thoroughgood (Chandler) widow.

Gerard Fowke, II, was the son of Gerard Fowke, I, of Virginia and Charles Co., Md. and Ann, born in England.

Gerard Fowke, I, was the son of Roger Fowke of Straffordshire, England.

Anne Thoroughgood (mother of Gerard Fowke III) was the daughter of Adam Thoroughgood and Sarah Offley, who were married in England and came to America prior to 1635.

Sarah Offley was the daughter of Anne Osborne Offley.

Anne Osborne Offley was the daughter of Sir Edward Osborne and Ann Hewett.

Ann Hewett was the daughter of Sir William Hewett.

Supplementary data on CECELIA REBECCA THORPE family connections:
From Hayden's Virginia Genealogies:

Col. Gerard Fowke and wife, Ann, came from Stafford Co., England. He was born in 1662 and died in Virginia in 1734. He received land in Westmoreland Co., Va. His will is dated 6 Jan. 1734; proved 20 Jan. 1734. He married, as his second wife, Sarah Burdett, of Charles Co., Md. They had a daughter, Ann Fowke, who married Robert Alexander, of Stafford Co., son of Robert Alexander (died 1704). Robert Alexander was born in 1688 and died in 1735. (p. 156)

Col. Gerard Fowke was a member of the House of Burgesses of Virginia in 1663. He moved to Charles Co., Md., in 1664, and was Burgess from Charles Co., Md. 2 Jan. 1665. He was also a justice. (p. 155)

From Maryland Heraldica, by Emily Lante, the BALTIMORE SUN, July 14, 1907:

Col. Gerard Fowke, II, was presented to the Maryland Assembly, 7 Sept. 1704, by Col. Smallwood, and he took the oath of office.

From Wm. & Mary Quarterly, 9W (1), 54, 55:

Robert Alexander was the father of Robert, who, in turn was the father of Parthenia. Both Roberts lived in Stafford, Va., and in 1701, the first Robert was a Justice of the county.

From Emma Estes Cobb's family records:

Col. Gerard Fowke, of Maryland and Virginia, was the son of Roger Fowke, of Breward, Stratfordshire, England, and was brought to America by his brother, Thomas, and settled first in Westmoreland Co., Va., by 1654. In England he had been gentleman of the bedchamber to Charles I, and a Colonel in the Royal Army. His wife, Ann, came with him to Virginia. He took up land in Westmoreland Co., and in 1663 was elected a burgess from this county. In 1664 Col. Fowke moved to Charles Co., Maryland and here he took up large estates. By 1665 he was unanimously elected a member of the Maryland Assembly from Charles Co. It is unusual to find a man a member of the House of Burgesses of two different counties in so short a time. He had moved to Port Tobacco when he left Virginia. He was made a colonel for Dorchester and a Justice of the Peace. This last high honor he held until his death, in Maryland, in 1669.

(Note - There is a conflict in data. Hayden seems to confuse the original Col. Gerard Fowke with his son. The first Gerard Fowke died in 1669, according to Emma Estes Cobb, and in 1734, in Hayden's material.)

Col. Gerard Fowke, II, of Maryland, was the son of Gerard Fowke, of Virginia and Maryland. He was born in 1662, and died in 1704. His wife was Anne Thoroughgood (Chandler), the widow of John Chandler, and daughter of Adam Thoroughgood and his wife, Sarah Offley. In 1629 and 1630 Adam Thoroughgood was Commissioner and Burgess for Elizabeth City Co., Va. About 1634 he removed to Lynhaven Bay, in the present county of Princess Anne; he was a member of the Council in 1637, and in the same year, presiding justice of the County Court of Lower Norfolk. He died in the spring of 1640.

Ann Offley, mother of Sarah Offley, was the daughter of Sir Edward Osborne (Knighted at Westminster 2 Feb. 1591); Sheriff of London, 1578; Lord Mayor 1585. He is buried in St. Dionis Back, London.

Sir Edward Osborne's wife was Ann Hewett, daughter and sole heiress of Sir William Hewett, Lord Mayor of London, 1559, "a merchant of great repute," married in 1562, buried at St. Martin Orgars, London, 14 July 1585.

Ann Offley was buried in Princess Anne Co., Va., and until the middle of the 19th century the coats-of-arms on the tomb were very legible. Her tomb was on Church Point, at the site of the old church.

Adam Thoroughgood's will, dated 17 April 1639-40, was proved 27 April 1640, and is on record at Portsmouth, Va. There is also an inventory.

Sarah Offley was baptized 16 April 1609; married 18 July 1627; and died in Virginia in 1657, seventeen years after her husband's death.

Col. Gerard Fowke, III, married first a Lomax and second Sarah Burdette of Charles Co., Md.; their daughter, Anne Fowke, married Robert Alexander, II, the son of Robert Alexander, I, a Justice of Stafford Co. The father of the first Robert Alexander was John Alexander.

Parthenia Alexander, daughter of Robert Alexander, II, married (1) Dade Massey, and (2) Townsend. She and her first husband, Dade Massey, had two daughters, one of whom, Sarah, married William Triplett.

Both Fowke and Thoroughgood are armorial families. Gerard Fowke, II, built Gunston Hall, the home of the celebrated George Mason, a cousin of the Fowkes.

William Triplett (5) Estes married LOUISE ALSTON RIDDICK; their daughter, Margaret (6) Estes, married John William Ponton; their daughter, Frances Sarah (7) Ponton, "Fannie", of Wylliesburg, Va., supplied this information on her RIDDICK and PONTON lines:

THE RIDDICKS

Louise Alston Riddick was the daughter of Joseph Alston Riddick, prosperous furniture dealer of Lawrenceville, Va., (son of Robert Riddick and Elizabeth Maroney) and Martha Harrison Lashley, who were married 31 Oct. 1832.

Joseph Alston Riddick was the son of Martha Harrison Lashley was the daughter of Benjamin Lashley and Mary Harrison.

THE PONTONS

John William Ponton's mother was a Bradshaw and his grandmother a Rice. (Tradition says that Rice University was named for this Rice family.)

Orphaned and raised by an uncle, at age 18 John Ponton left his uncle's farm. He married Margaret Estes and lived in Henderson, N.C. for about four years, where they had a store. But five years after their marriage, John lost his health, so they moved to Chase City, Va., because the Lithia water, available there, seemed to help him (stomach problems). They bought a farm and lived there two years. In November, 1899, they moved to the present family home, "Home Place", in Wylliesburg, Va.

Frances Sarah (7) Ponton, "Fannie", the genealogist of that family, lives at "Home Place" today. Fanny also wrote that her brother, Cooper, was named for family friends, the Coopers.

CONNECTIONS WITH ALBERT MONROE(5) ESTES BRANCH

Albert Monroe (6) Estes, grandson of Joel (4) Estes, married BELLE GATES. The following information on the Gates family was supplied by Hortense Ambrose McGehee, of Eden, N.C. Hortense is not an Estes. Her grandmother, Lena Gates, was a sister of Belle Gates, wife of Albert Monroe Estes.

THE GATES FAMILY

"GATES" is derived from residence near a gate of a fortified town or fortress.

First of name in England was Thomas Gates of whom mention is made in 1327. A Gates is named in the will of Henry VIII.

Most famous of the name in Virginia was Sir Thomas Gates who arrived May 24, 1610, and was the Governor of the Colony after Sir Thomas Dale. Sir Thomas Gates was on the famous voyage to America of Sir Francis Drake, in 1585-86. He was knighted in 1596.

In 1957, Gates kin then living in Madison Co., Tenn. stated that 7 Gates held land in Henrico Co. in 1723 - brothers according to tradition.

A more recent Gates ancestor, William, was a soldier in the Revolution. He was followed by numerous Gates who were landholders - interested in cards, racing, fox hunting and high-rolling.

William Ward Gates born 1812 - later editor and owner of the "West Tennessee Whig" - forerunner of the "Jackson Sun" - Jackson, Tenn.

Lena Gates Smith was named for Lena Nora Gates Given Sissen, daughter of Benjamin Franklin and Narcissa Newsom Gates. (Lena Gates was my grandmother - Hortense McGehee).

William Beverly Gates born 1842 was a half brother of Lena Nora Gates Given Sissen - was wounded at Shiloh - entered cotton business in Memphis - was an original member of the Memphis Cotton Exchange - he is the only Gates within my memory to make a "fortune" - he did much to keep all the family in the Orysa area going and educated during the years after the Civil War."

Albert Monroe (5) Estes had a son, Thomas Hale (6) Estes, whose daughter, Mattie V. (7) Estes married A.J. PARKER; their child, Patrick Mann(8) Parker, married ELIZABETH FISHER, a great-granddaughter of WILLIAM MOORER. The colonial home of the Moorers, is now the home of Elizabeth Fisher Parker, Patrick's widow, and was part of a West Tennessee landmarks tour sponsored by the Lauderdale County Academy, Oct. 11, and 12, 1976.

The following are excerpts from the STATE GAZETTE, Dyersburg, Tenn., Friday, Oct. 10, 1975, describing Elizabeth Parker's home. (Permission for reprint here granted by the State Gazette).

THE MOORER MANSION

William Allan Moorer purchased a considerable amount of land in Durhamville and built a very ornate and lovely home. The house burned the last year of the Civil War and another house was built in the same place later during the year.

The present house which is owned by Mr. and Mrs. P.M. Parker, Sr., a great-granddaughter of William Moorer, is a lovely colonial Mansion. The house was built of yellow poplar wood grown on the farm and held together with wooden pegs. This house boasts having the first flat roof in the county. It has six tall columns and a low ground-level porch. Chimneys on either end adorn the lovely home. It consists of ten rooms and two baths, all rooms having fourteen foot ceilings. Only one room has the original wide panels in flooring, and all windows are original. The majority of the antique furniture in the home belonged to Mrs. Parker's mother, however, she does have a chest that belonged to the Moorers. Lovely as this house may be, it is not nearly as ornate or as fine as the first house...

From PLANT CITY: ITS ORIGIN AND HISTORY by Quintilla Geer Bruton and D.E. Bailey, Jr., published by Valkyrie Press, St. Petersburg, Fla. (Permission granted for reprint here).

THE MOODY FAMILY

The Moodys, for the greater part of the last century, have contributed substantially to the development of east Hillsborough County and have established an admirable record for exemplary citizenship and useful public service.

The Moody ancestors came to America prior to the American Revolution, locating originally in Williamsburg and eastern Virginia. From there they migrated down the Shenandoah Valley of western Virginia into western North Carolina and eastern Tennessee.

MOREAU ESTES MOODY

In 1885, Moreau Estes Moody, brother of Thomas Edwin Moody) came to Mango, Florida, and established a drug store which he relocated, in 1891, in the promising new town of Plant City. As an accommodation to the farmers and neighbors, he had kept money for them in his store safe. As an outgrowth of this, he and Colonel James L. Young of Plant City organized the town's first bank, the Hillsboro State Bank, in 1902. M. E. Moody succeeded to the bank presidency on the death of Colonel Young in 1928 and held that position until his death in 1945.

As the principal banker and one of the most stable businessmen in the community, Mr. Moody's knowledge, ability and advice were utilized in the early development of Plant City. Among other things, he was a motivating influence in the establishment of the South Florida Baptist Hospital and donated five acres of the ten-acre site on which the hospital was built.

Reece (9) Smith, of Tampa, Fla., grandson of Mary Noel (7) Estes and THOMAS EDWIN MOODY, supplied the following information on the MOODY and MARSHALL families, from "Cousin Edna Loving's" family records:

Great Grandfather Marshall Moody was married before he married Great Grandmother Elizabeth Shelton Speed. Our great grandmother's maiden name was Shelton. She gave each of her Moody children as their middle names Shelton, namely, Henry Shelton, David Shelton, and James Shelton.

By Elizabeth Shelton's first marriage to Mr. Speed she had five children 2 boys 3 girls namely Julia Speed, Emily and Amanda Speed (twins, Rufus Speed, and Joe Speed. History of this family found elsewhere.

Great Grandfather Marshall Moody by his first marriage to Miss Phillips of Memphis had three children namely, John, William and Rebecca. Rebecca married a man whose name was Howell. All we know of William and John is that a son of each man visited in the home of Henry Shelton Moody and my mother said they were nice men and men of whom we may be proud.

Conundrum about Henry Shelton Moody

My grandfather Henry Shelton Moody had no own sisters four half sisters namely Rebecca Moody, Julia, Emily, and Amanda Speed. Grandfather Moody had four half brothers William and John Moody, Joe Speed and Rufus Speed. Grandfather Henry Shelton Moody had two own brothers - namely David Shelton Moody, James Shelton Moody.

Thomas Edwin Moody's father MARSHALL MOODY was the son of — Moody who married MIRAH MARSHALL. William Reece (9) Smith, Jr., sent the following history of the Marshall family.

THE MARSHALL FAMILY

Tom Marshall left Lincolnshire, England about 1735 with his wife and 5 children, to live in the Colonies, purposely to get away from Political Confusion. Their sons were: John, William, Humphry, and Tom, a daughter Mary Marshall was the youngest. This family located in Fauquier Co., Va., and their sons later settled in Ky, Va., and Pa.

John Marshall born 1723 was called John Marshall of the Woods. His brother Tom Marshall born 1730, called Tom Marshall of the Forests. Both Tom and Daniel Boone went to live in Ky. forests and were skilled craftsmen.

Col. Tom Marshall (born 1730) married Mary Keith (about 1754) Parents of fifteen children. First born Chief Justice (born 1755 Brother Humphry Marshall, youngest sister Mirah Marshall (Find they had few daughters and many sons). Miss Marshall (born about 1763) daughter of Col. Tom Marshall, lived in Fauquier Co., Va. - married a Mr. Moody (This Miss Marshall is a sister of Chief Justice Marshall).

Their children were Marshall Moody, Henry Moody, John Moody - one brother moved to Ala.

The following information on the Rice family comes from LAUDERDALE COUNTY FROM EARLIEST TIMES, written by descendants of its pioneer citizens, Edited by Kate Johnston Peters, Sugar Hill Lauderdale County Library, Ripley, Tenn.:

THE RICE FAMILY

Thomas G. Rice, Shadrach Rice, and John P. Rice, three brothers, left the Georgetown District in South Carolina in the winter of 1836, with their families, slaves, and household effects. Scarlet fever broke out among the children and two of Shadrach and Elizabeth Linerieux Rice's children died. They arrived in the part of Lauderdale County known now as Orysa in April, 1837. Shadrach Rice was the father of C.S.O. Rice, who married Lucie Q. Estes. Their sons are: Ernest Rice, Sr., M.E. Rice, Sr., Ralph E. Rice, Sr., and Shadrach Rice. M.E. and Shad built homes at Orysa, where M.E. Now operates a store. C.S.O. Rice was born in Lauderdale County. He attended Law School at Lebanon, Tennessee, in 1859-60. About 1874, he was elected to represent Lauderdale County in the Legislature. The large two story house where he and his family lived for so many years is still standing.

From the Shadrach Rice diary: "Sept. 29, 1841 -- commenced to work on church with 3 hands and Bros. Thos. Rice, 3 hands. Dec. 3 1841 -- Finish sawing stuff for church. March 6, 1842 -- memorandum of shingles counted at the church -- 18,800 that was jointed."

Thomas Franklin Rice was the son of Shadrach and Louisa Elizabeth Linerieux Rice. He married Sarah Elizabeth Borum, a daughter of Mr. James H. Borum. His son, Elmer T., married Mildred Estes. Neither are living. A daughter, Minnie L., married Mr. Harvey Davis of Ripley. The home of T.F. Rice, located near Orysa, still stands today. It was built at the close of the Civil War. None of the Rice family occupy the home at present (1956). Miss Minnie moved to Ripley some years ago. T.F. Rice served in the Confederate Army throughout the entire Civil War.

ANNA ESTES (4) HACKER STRAWBRIDGE

Anna Estes Hacker Strawbridge, grandmother of Edith Hacker Shipley (Mrs. James Rutland Moore) celebrated her 100th birthday on February 20, 1980. The following are excerpts from an article in the PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER of February 21, 1980, by Ruth Seltzer, covering her birthday celebration. This information was supplied by Virginia (8) Estes Jacoby (Mrs. Edward R. Jacoby) of Abington, Pa. (Permission granted by Phila. Inquirer for reprint here).

Mrs. Francis R. Strawbridge, the matriarch of Philadelphia's Strawbridge family, celebrated her 100th birthday yesterday. Members of her immediate family gathered last night at Woodside, her home in Germantown, for a birthday supper.

Mrs. Strawbridge (nee Anna Estes Hacker) was born in Philadelphia. She is one of this city's most outstanding citizens...

She is still alert. At the birthday party, she greeted her son and daughters, G. Stockton Strawbridge; Mrs. Walter Penn Shipley, Jr. (Mary) and Mrs. R. Philip Custer (Elizabeth). There, too, were grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Her memory is excellent. She can recall her childhood days when she wintered in center city and summered in Germantown. She was born when Rutherford B. Hayes was President of the United States.

In recognition of Anna Strawbridge's birthday, President Carter sent a congratulatory message. So did U.S. Sen. Richard S. Schweiker, U.S. Sen. H. John Heinz, 3d and Gov. Thornburgh...

Mrs. Strawbridge was married in 1902 to Francis R. Strawbridge, an executive of Strawbridge & Clothier. Her father-in-law, Justus C. Strawbridge,... founded the department store in 1868 with Isaac H. Clothier.

A lifelong member of the Society of Friends, she attended the Germantown Friends Meeting on Coulter Street regularly until she was well past 98.

As a descendant of passengers who sailed to Philadelphia with William Penn, she is a member of the Welcome Society...

Anna Estes Strawbridge is the author of four books of poetry -- "Rhyme and Reason"; "More Rhyme, Less Reason"; "Random Rhymes" and "A Bridge of Rhymes". The latter was written as a bridge to her great-grandchildren.

She has 15 grandchildren and 35 great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Strawbridge has lived from the era of horse-drawn carriages to the space age. She loved to ride in helicopters from the roof of the Strawbridge & Clothier Philadelphia store to the openings of the new S & C stores in the suburbs. After one of those trips, she told her great-granddaughter, Wendy, "I want thee always to remember that thee rode in a helicopter with thy father, thy grandfather and they great-grandmother."

Anna Strawbridge (her good friends call her "Nannie") was president of the League of Women Voters of Philadelphia for several years. She is a former president of the National Society of Colonial Dames of America in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. That post was later held by her daughter, Mary Shipley. Both Mrs. Strawbridge and Mrs. Shipley are Distinguished Daughters of Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Strawbridge was twice president of the Morton Street Day Nursery, which is now part of the Germantown Settlement. She was the first woman board member of the Blue Cross of Greater Philadelphia. She is now an honorary board member of Germantown Hospital. And she is an honorary vice president of the Committee of 1926, which runs historic Strawberry Mansion in Fairmount Park.

At the birthday party last night, 71 members of Mrs. Strawbridge's family gathered for supper.

During the party, a special booklet was given to the guest of honor and her family. The booklet, presented by the board of directors of Strawbridge & Clothier is entitled, "Anna Estes Strawbridge: A Celebration." Prepared as a "tribute to a remarkable woman," the 16-page booklet contains many photographs -- pictures with her husband and family, pictures at store groundbreaking ceremonies, a picture at the opening of the S&C heliport, and a reproduction (on the cover) of a 1927 oil portrait.

Printed in the book is a resolution from the board of directors saluting Mrs. Strawbridge. The resolution, in part, says: "Whereas, during the course of reaching this remarkable milestone, as wife, mother, and grandmother of members of this board, she has watched a great Company grow and prosper... and whereas, by her clarity of thought and speech, her gentle humor, her thoughtful consideration of others, and her abiding serenity, so evident both in mind and face, she has been an inspiration to every member of this board and to the store family, be it resolved that the board of directors of Strawbridge & Clothier hereby joins with Anna Estes Strawbridge in celebrating her 100th year and expresses to her its heartfelt admiration, respect and affection."

... She is an amazing woman, one who had volunteered many decades to help this city, this region, this nation.

Cary Listings

The Virginia Carys are descendants of the Carys of Bristol, England, a family first mentioned in the "Doomsday Book" compiled in 1086 by order of William of Normandy, who conquered England in 1066. This book recorded the results of a complete survey of England, inventorying all acquisitions. It included every piece of land, its size, a description of the terrain, its value and, in many cases, whatever was on the land, including livestock. The original manuscript is now preserved at the Public Record Office in London. Even at that early date in history, the Carys (then spelled "Kari" and "Cari") were landed gentry, with two manors -- one in Devonshire and one in Somersetshire.

The first ancestor of record, William, served as sheriff and then as mayor of Bristol during the time of Henry VIII. The "Cary Appendix" which follows these listings, contains material about Henry VIII's second wife, Ann Boleyn, a cousin of the Carys, and mother of Elizabeth I.

William's son, Richard, a draper, was a merchant and elder of the City of Bristol. Richard's son, William, also a draper, followed in the footsteps of his grandfather, serving as sheriff and then mayor of Bristol. His son, John, a draper, married Alice Hobson, daughter of a Bristol mayor. Their son, Miles, was the original emigrant to Virginia.

Miles was born in 1622 in Bristol and emigrated to Windmill Point, Warwick County, Virginia, between 1640 and 1645. He married, not later than 1646, Anne Taylor, whose father, Thomas Taylor, owned large tracts of land in that area. Miles and Anne inherited her father's holdings, which included a plantation known as "the Forest". He died in Warwick County, Virginia, in 1667.

Miles' son, Henry, was a Master Builder, responsible for design and construction of many of the large public buildings of Colonial Williamsburg. In 1939, when the CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY was published, there were no identifiable traces of Henry Cary's buildings. Since then, Colonial Williamsburg has been largely restored and we can now visit and browse about in the beautiful historic edifices which our ancestor Henry Cary built. The outstanding examples of his work are the Governor's Palace and the First Capitol. He was also responsible for rebuilding William and Mary College after the fire in 1705. Details on all his buildings are in the "Cary Appendix" which follows these listings. Henry married Judith Lockey by May 24, 1671. He died in 1720.

Henry Cary, Jr., son of Henry and Judith, was born around 1675. One of the earliest graduates of William and Mary College, he carried on his father's contracting business. Much of his work was still standing in 1939 and has been restored and preserved by the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation. His descendants the Bells, Randolphs, Pages, and Harrisons, lived in Cumberland and Buckingham Counties on his land holdings for many years.

Judith Cary, daughter of Henry, Jr. and his second wife, Anne Edwards, married David Bell (captain in the French and Indian War). This lovely lady had her portrait painted by Copley. Judith and David Bell's daughter, Elizabeth Cary Bell, born about 1758 in Chesterfield County, married Daniel Bates. (The CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY gives a brief history of the Bates Family on pp. 69-75). Elizabeth died in Kentucky in 1825. Sarah Langhorne Bates, daughter of Elizabeth and her husband Daniel, married Captain Joel Estes on Oct. 13, 1801. This marriage links the Carys of Bristol, England and Colonial Virginia to our branch of the Estes family. Sarah and Joel migrated to Haywood County, Tennessee in 1823, and some of their descendants have lived on and farmed the same land ever since.

Several of Judith Cary Bell's children, in addition to Elizabeth, Sarah's mother, were listed in the CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY on pp. 58-68. New information was available on the descendants of Judith Cary Bell's namesake, called here "Judith Cary Bell, II". She married Colonel Nathaniel Gist of Virginia, who served in the Revolutionary War. Partial listings were received from another line of Miles Cary descendants ; their incomplete listings are included in the "Cary Family Appendix."

Cary History & Legends

THE CARY FAMILY IN ENGLAND

The Cary family has been documented back to 1086, when two of their homes were listed in the "Doomsday Book." This book was compiled by edict of William of Normandy to take stock of his booty after he conquered England.

The Bristol Carys, from whom our branch of American Carys are descended, have been decreed by the Royal College of Heralds to be the same as the Devonshire Carys and are privileged to bear the Cary coat-of-arms.

The first Cary to whom we can directly and without interruption trace our descent is William (1) Cary of Bristol, born in 1500 (some sources give 1492).

Queen Elizabeth I was very close to her Cary cousins from Devonshire. These were the children of her mother's sister, Mary Boleyn, wife of William Cary (a different William, not our direct ancestor) of Devonshire. Her affection for them was strong enough to prompt her to order the Royal College of Heralds to record the Cary Pedigree, showing their connections with the "noble houses of Beaufort, Somerset, Spencer, Bryan, Tulford and so forth." There is a hiatus between these Devonshire Carys and our Bristol Cary ancestors. Future research may turn up the missing ancestors.

When the CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY was published, in 1939, there were three Cary lines still existing in England: (1) Falkland; (2) Cockingham and Torre Abbey; and (3) Somersetshire. Sir Robert Archibald Cary, Viscount Falkland, Lord Cary, of Cornwall, (member of the House of Lords), sent his genealogical chart and his and his son's listings from BURKE'S PEERAGE AND BARONETAGE.

Burke's Peerage, Ltd., London, England, reports on the other two Cary lines (the Cockingham and Torre Abbey and the Somersetshire) in their letter to us dated 29 May 1980, "As far as our research can tell, both the Cary lines you inquired about are still extinct." (signed) Felicity Mortimer.

THE CARY FAMILY IN AMERICA

The American Carys who settled in Virginia brought the tradition of their British heritage with them. The tombstone of our original immigrant ancestor, Miles Cary, which is still extant at Windmill Point in Warwick County, Virginia, bears the Cary Coat-of-Arms.

Much data supplementary to that in the CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY has been accumulated in our research of the early Virginia Carys and their descendants. We chose several items here as samples of their contributions to America, something of how they lived, and what kind of people they were.

The first item in this section is from a genealogy book, listing the Carys among those early Virginia settlers who had vested rights to use coats-of-arms.

The proof that the original Miles Cary owned a building in Old Jamestown is excerpted from a book published by the National Park Service, Washington, D.C.

A newspaper article from the Baltimore SUN tells about Miles Cary's tombstone and the Cary Coat-of-Arms.

Miles' son and grandson, Henry Cary, Sr., and Jr., were prominent citizens and builders of Williamsburg, Va. Henry Cary's public buildings have been completely restored since publication of the CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY (1939) and much has been written about these Cary builders and their work. They were the most outstanding of our colonial Cary ancestors.

Also included here is a request for help in having the United States Postal Service issue a stamp commemorating Henry Cary, Sr., "Master Builder" of Colonial Williamsburg.

An excerpt from an architectural book published by Colonial Williamsburg documents Henry Cary's building of the Capitol.

Two other items deal with Henry Cary's building of the Governor's Palace (a jewel among the Colonial Williamsburg buildings) and the Gaol (jail house).

To indicate typical obligations of an 18th century construction work, we include a specimen of an indenture contract between an apprentice and his master.

Henry (3) Cary, Jr. built several large homes in Colonial Virginia, and two, "Amphill" and "Wilton" are still standing, beautifully restored, in Richmond, on the James River. "Amphill" is privately owned. "Wilton" is the Virginia Headquarters of the National Society of Colonial Dames of America. We report on a visit to these two landmarks.

The President's House at William and Mary College was built by Henry Cary, Jr., and an item from the College library files tells an interesting architectural fact about the building.

A book on early eighteenth century Virginia houses, also published by Colonial Williamsburg, tells that the Brush-Everard House was lived in by Henry Cary, Jr.

A newspaper article tells about Archibald Cary (brother of Estes ancestor Judith), a strong, flamboyant, colonial patriot. Several sources state that, without his financial support the Revolutionary War would have failed.

Four items deal with "Bellmont", home of Judith Cary and David Bell. It is still standing, restored, in Buckingham County, Virginia.

Judith Cary Bell, the lady of "Bellmont", had her portrait painted by Copley. It was hanging in Blair House, Washington, D.C., when the CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY was published in 1939. A Cary descendant, Major Gist Blair was the owner of the House and the painting at that time. We learned where the painting is today and tell how its whereabouts was discovered.

There was a romance between a Virginia Cary lady and George Washington. The writer quoted here thinks the outcome of Washington's proposal of marriage to her might have changed the course of United States history. We include it here as an interesting and romantic tale about a Cary lady from a collateral line.

Two Cary documents are included here which are important to proof of direct descendancy from Miles Cary. These are needed for those wishing to join patriotic societies requiring that one have an ancestor who was a prominent citizen and high official in America before 1700.

The Blair family of Washington, D.C. and Silver Spring, Maryland, are descendants of the Carys. They share with us common ancestors Judith Cary Bell and her husband, David. Many Blairs have played prominent roles in American history, and one of their family homes, Blair House, is the guest house of the President of the United States. Excerpts from a history book written for children tell some stories and legends about the Blairs of Washington and Maryland.

THE CARY FAMILY IN VIRGINIA

The Virginia Carys are among the early distinguished families which inhabited the Peninsula between the James and York Rivers, and are highly praised in numerous historical accounts. Several of these accounts are quoted in the CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY. Another is included here to let Cary descendants know that they have inherited this much-heralded blood, and to remind us all to strive to live up to and be worthy of it. The following passage is from VIRGINIA GENEALOGIES by Rev. Horace Edwin Hayden, M.A., p. xiii:

Whilst I heartily endorse the just sentiment of the poet-laureate:

'Tis only noble to be good!

Kind hearts are more
 Than coronets
 And simple faith than Norman Blood!

yet it is true that according to one test there is more evidence preserved of gentle lineage in Virginia than in any other of the original American colonies. The list of families in the colony who invested right used coat-armor, as attested in examples of such use on tombstones, preserved bookplates, and impressions of seals is more than 150. The virtue of such family investment by royal favor may appear somewhat in the fact that the Virginia rebels Claiborne, Bacon, Washington and Lee, were all armigers, and among others were the Amblers, Archers, Armisteads, Banisters, Barradalls, Beverleys, Blands, Bollings, Byrds, CARYS, Caringtons, Cloptons, Claytons, Corbins. . . .

MILES (5) CARY

Miles, the original Cary immigrant, jointly owned the "old State House" in Jamestown, Va., and its adjoining buildings. When he acquired it, it was in ruins. There is a picture of the block restored in TYLER'S CRADLE OF THE REPUBLIC, p. 167.

The following item documents Miles Cary's ownership of this structure. It comes from ARCHEOLOGICAL EXCAVATIONS AT JAMESTOWN, VA, by John L. Cotter, Archeological Research Series, Number Four, National Park Service, U.S. Dept. of the Interior, Washington, D.C., 1958:

The VIRGINIA MAGAZINE OF HISTORY AND BIOGRAPHY (Gregory 1935) July 1935 quotes data on Ownership. It gives the owners of the western section of the actual First Statehouse group of three houses as Richard Bennett from William Berkeley, March 30, 1655; Theoderic Bland, son-in-law of Bennett and Speaker of the Assembly; Berkeley (again); Henry Randolph; Thomas Ludwell and Thomas Stegg, before January 1, 1667. For the middle and eastern sections: The colony from John Harvey, April 7, 1641; Thomas Woodhouse, ordinary Keeper, October 17, 1655; Anne Talbot, September 1, 1657; George Marable, February 25, 1663; Henry Randolph of Henrico; Nathaniel Bacon and the Executors of Miles Cary (Middle Structure); and Thomas Swann of Surrey (eastern structure; April 7, 1671. . . .

THE TOMBSTONE OF MILES (5) CARY

Miles Cary's tombstone has been restored since the writing of the following article. There is a photo of the ceremony celebrating its restoration opposite p. 36 of the CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY.

From the column "Virginia Heraldry" by Jane Griffith Keys, the Baltimore SUN, Nov. 25, 1906:

...Col. Miles Cary, the immigrant and founder of the Carys in Virginia, has on his tombstone an inscription which gives the name of his father, mother and maternal grandfather. The ancestry of this branch of the ancient family of Cary has been derived from a pedigree registered in 1699 in Herald's College, London, by John Cary, of Bristol, England, gentleman, and his brother, Richard Cary, Alderman, of London ...

With the pedigree are filed copies of wills, etc., proving it. A confirmation of arms was duly granted in 1699, setting forth that the branch of the family seated at Bristol had "time out of mind" borne the arms of the Cary family of Devonshire, viz, argent, on a bend, sable; three roses argent, with a silver swan for their crest. This coat-of-arms is carved on the tombstone of Col. Miles Cary, the immigrant.

Thus the three lovely roses of France, which had their birth in Arragon and were carried to England by the Knight of Arragon, have for the last 300 years lent their bloom and sweetness to old Virginia.

HENRY (6) CARY

Miles' son, Henry Cary, Sr., Master Builder, contributed greatly to early Virginia history by constructing many of Williamsburg's public buildings. And his son, Henry, Jr., followed in his father's profession. The word "profession" is used because both are reported to have been "supervising architects" in several sources. One such source is THE PUBLIC BUILDINGS OF WILLIAMSBURG, AN ARCHITECTURAL HISTORY, published by Colonial Williamsburg in 1958. On page 40, Marcus Whiffen, the author, used this term for Henry Cary, Sr., with reference to his building of the first Capitol. Photos of several of their buildings appear elsewhere in this book.

Efforts are being made to honor this long-overlooked historical figure, Henry Cary, Sr., by a Commemorative Stamp, culminating with a Cary Family Reunion at Williamsburg on the Day of First Issue. Henry Cary's descendants will be notified if and when the authorities of the U.S. Postal Service decide to single out Henry Cary for such an honor. Your support would help convince them. Please write to: Jack Williams, Coordinator, Citizen's Stamp Advisory Committee, Office of Stamps, U.S. Postal Service, Wash., D.C. 20260; or telephone (202)245-4000. Contacting your senators, congressman or other political figures would also help.

HENRY (6) CARY'S BUILDINGS

Henry Cary built the Court House of York Co., Va.; the Fort on the York River, Va.; and, in Williamsburg -- the Wren Building of William and Mary College, and reconstruction of the college after the fire there in 1705; the first Capitol; and the Governors Palace, started by him in 1706 and finished by his son, Henry Cary, Jr., in 1723.

Colonial Williamsburg, Inc., gave permission to reprint here the following passaged from THE EIGHTEENTH-CENTURY HOUSE OF WILLIAMSBURG, by Marcus Whiffen, published by the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation:

THE CAPITOL p. 40. . . . it is not until November (1701) that we find the first mention of the eventual "overseer", which goes as follows:

A petition of Mr. Henry Cary to his Excellcy to be Employed to Oversee the building of the Capitol and by his Excell refer'd to the Consideration of the Committee, being considered The next day being the 10th of the sd Instant Ober the Comtee desired the said Henry Cary to agree with any Capeable pson to make 500000 bricks for the Capitol at 18s. per M and at the same time promised to pay him for all Such Trouble as he should be at in makeing bargains for the Comtee as they directed according to the Merit of his Service. (From P.R.O., C.O. 5/1312, being The report of "the Committee Appointed to Inspect the Act directing the building of the Capitol &c. and to examine the proceedings of the Committee appointed by the said Act to oversee the building of it).

. . . . his (Henry Cary's) home was The Forest, in Warwick County - the house has gone -- and in 1704 he owned a comfortable 670 acres (as against the 600 of his brother Miles) We first hear of him engaged in building works in 1697, when he built the first Courthouse at Yorktown and was paid for a platform at the fort there.

In England the term overseer. . . was rarely used in connection with building works. In the plantation it had of course a special meaning, but it was probably applied to x x x Cary as a translation, so to speak, of the term surveyor:

. . . . It should be understood that Henry Cary was not the "undertaker" of the Capitol. His position was rather that of the modern supervising architect, with authority to enter into contracts on behalf of his client. At first, as the passage quoted above shows, he was on trial; in April 1701 he was given 50 pounds "for his particular attendance and service upon the business of the Capitol til that time." and in July that year he agreed with the building committee for a salary of 100 pounds per annum. Ibid.

P.43 In 1703 Henry Cary Sent a report (signed by him) to England giving information on when the Court first sat in the new building:

That parte that the Corte sitts in is Compleatly finnishd on the outside except the balcony over the Grate doore Comming in on the west side & the lower flower are finished for that the Corte sate there in Aprill last. (Op. cit. 5/1313)

P.46 As a rule the "finishing" of public buildings is an indeterminate affair, and the Capitol provides no exception. If one must have a date to answer August 8, 1701, when the foundation was laid, one might choose November 30, 1705; on that day the four master keys that had been in the keeping of Cary and others concerned with the work of construction were broken in the presence of the Speaker of the House of Burgesses. On December 5 Cary was officially discharged from the position of overseer. (Nevertheless he continued to be employed about the building from time to time during the period in which he was chiefly engaged on the Palace, carrying out some alterations of an unspecified nature as late as 1710.)

The following item, documenting that Henry Cary, Sr. built the Governor's Palace in Williamsburg, comes from THE PUBLIC BUILDINGS OF WILLIAMSBURG, AN ARCHITECTURAL HISTORY. (Permission granted for reprint here).

THE PALACE p. 54-5 In his first message to the Assembly, in October 1705, (Governor) Nott told them that he was "by the Royal Command to Recommend Earnestly to you Gentlemen. . . the Building a house fit for the Reception of your Governor.". . . THE ACT OF 1702. . . :

And be it further enacted, That Henry Cary be appointed, and he is hereby appointed an overseer to inspect, oversee, and provide for the building aforesaid, with full power to begin, carry on, and finish the same. . .

pp. 61, 65 The class of house to which it belonged was. . ."double pile." Two rooms deep, compact and block-like, the double pile was fundamentally different from the houses of the older Elizabethan-Jacobean tradition. . . . Both as the first double pile in Virginia and as the official residence of the representative of the Crown, the Palace could scarcely fail to affect the subsequent development of architecture in the colony. . . .

...In 1720. . . November the Burgesses appointed a committee to ask the Governor what he thought should be done for "the finishing the Governours House Gardens and other works which he is Impowered by Law to finish." . . . So three of the Burgesses, accompanied by Henry Cary, Jr., were sent to inspect the Palace and its gardens, the Magazine, and the Gaol. . . . Before Christmas an Act had been passed to enable Cary to finish the building that his father had begun more than fourteen years before.

pp. 106 THE BRAFFERTON In 1723 the College received its first additional building, known today as Brafferton Hall or the Brafferton, but at first simply as Brafferton. It was built as an Indian school.

p.107. . . The date of the Brafferton, 1723, is established by an inscribed brick to the right of the window on the west side of the south door. The available records do not tell us who built it, but Henry Cary, Jr., is a safe guess. He had taken over the completion of the Palace three years before; in the course of the next ten he was to build the President's House and the Chapel at the College. If he was the builder, he was probably the designer too.

THE GOVERNOR'S PALACE

The Governor's Palace is Williamsburg's most elegant and imposing building. Its life spanned no more than seventy-four years, with but sixty of actual occupancy.

In this brief period the Palace witnessed events that in any nation would have been considered momentous. Virginians, sure that they could govern themselves better than king and Parliament were doing, worked out in Williamsburg the basic principles and statements of democratic thought. In front of the Palace - as well as at the Capitol and before the Courthouse on Duke of Gloucester Street - American independence was proclaimed on July 25, 1776, amidst the acclamation of townsfolk and the firing of cannon and muskets. From the English lion and the Scottish unicorn chiseled in stone above the wrought-iron entrance gate to the coat of arms of George II carved in the outside pediment of the supper room wall, the Palace recalls vividly the power and prestige of the British crown during Virginia's colonial period.

The Palace served both as residence and office for one of the most remarkable successions of able men ever to govern a British colony: Alexander Spotswood, Hugh Drysdale, William Gooch, Robert Dinwiddie, Francis Fauquier, Norborne Berkeley (baron de Botetourt), and, finally, John Murray, earl of Dunmore. The last, a nobleman of Scottish birth, fled its halls before dawn one June morning in 1775, thus ending for all time British rule in Virginia. The structure later served as the executive mansion for the first two governors of the state of Virginia, Patrick Henry and Thomas Jefferson. . . .

The "Bodleian Plate", as it became known, remains perhaps the most spectacular single discovery by Colonial Williamsburg historians who combed documentary and archival repositories on both sides of the Atlantic. This engraved copper plate was found in the Bodleian Library of Oxford University. Among other Williamsburg views, it revealed the facade of the Palace between 1732 and 1747, its advance buildings, and some of the garden areas. This plate indicated, too, locations of windows, the iron balcony, chimneys, roof pitch, and cupola - details that could only have been conjectured from documents or excavated remains. The plate is now in the Colonial Williamsburg collections.

[The reconstructed Palace, furnished according to the inventories of Governors Fauquier, Botetourt and Dunmore, is open to the public daily for tours and special programs.]

THE PUBLIC GAOL

ERECTED IN 1703-1704 BY HENRY CARY, who simultaneously supervised the building of the Capitol, this original brick structure served the colony of Virginia as a prison for over seventy-five years. Its clientele during this period included pirates, murderers, thieves, mental patients, runaway slaves, and a British governor. When the capital moved to Richmond in 1780, the Commonwealth of Virginia turned over the Gaol (pronounced jail) to the city of Williamsburg. The city, as well as James City County, utilized this building as a prison until 1910.

The Gaol functioned primarily as the prison for the General Court. A prisoner scheduled to appear before the court, which convened in the Capitol nearby, was held here until his trial and, if convicted, remained to await the execution of his sentence.

Customary punishments in colonial Virginia did not include long periods of confinement. Rather than maintain prisoners for lengthy terms at the expense of the taxpayers, punishments of varying degrees of severity were meted out quickly. Depending on the crime, these included hanging, branding a forehead or hand with an identifying mark, such as the "T" for thievery, banishment from the colony, whipping, and the assessment of fines.

[Now over 276 years old, the Gaol is exhibited to the public by the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation.]

APPRENTICESHIP OF WILLIAMSBURG CONSTRUCTION WORKERS

To give a flavor of how the first Williamsburg buildings were erected, from the angle of the laborers, a "specimen indenture" of an apprentice to one of the "Masters", under our ancestor, Henry Cary, Master Builder, is reprinted here from THE EIGHTEENTH-CENTURY HOUSES OF WILLIAMSBURG, by Marcus Whiffen, published by the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation. (Permission granted for reprint here).

This indenture Witnesseth that John Webb an Orphan hath put himself, and by these Presents doth voluntarily and of his own free Will and Accord put himself apprentice to William Phillips of Williamsburg Bricklayer to learn his Art, Trade and Mystery; and after the Manner of an Apprentice to serve the said William Phillips from the day of the date hereof for and during and unto the full end and term of five years next ensuing during all which Term, the said Apprentice, his said Master faithfully shall serve, his Secrets keep, his lawful commands at all Times readily obey; He shall do no damage to his said Master, nor see it be done by others, without giving Notice thereof to his said Master. He shall not waste his said Master's Goods nor lend them unlawfully to any. He shall not commit Fornication, nor contract Matrimony within the said Term. At Cards, Dice or any other unlawful Game he shall not play whereby his said Master may have damage. With his own Goods, nor the Goods of others without Licence from his Master he shall not buy or sell. He shall not absent himself day or night from his said Master's Service, without his Leave, nor haunt Alehouses, Taverns, or Play Houses, but in all Things behave himself as a faithful Apprentice ought to do during the said Term, And the said Master shall use the utmost of his Endeavours to teach, or cause to be taught or instructed the said Apprentice in the Trade or Mystery of a Bricklayer and procure or provide for him sufficient Meat Drink Cloaths, Washing and Lodging fitting for an Apprentice during the said Term of five years and for the true Performance of all and singular the Covenants and Agreements aforesaid the Parties bind themselves, each unto the other by these Presents. In Witness whereof the said Parties have interchangeably set their Hands and Seals hereunto dated the 21st day of June in the Second year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord George the third King of Great Britain Anonque Domini one thousand seven hundred and sixty two.

John Welch
William Phillips.

The things enjoined on and forbidden to the apprentice varied hardly at all, whatever the master's trade, although the form of words might vary: Henry Johnson of Elizabeth City County, binding himself to Nathaniel Hook of York County, carpenter, in 1709, undertook not to "keep Company with any Lewd Woman," while Henry Burradall, binding himself to Matthew Burradall of the same county and trade in 1750, was not to "Haunt bad Suspected Houses". . . .

HENRY (7) CARY, JR.'S BUILDINGS

Henry Cary, Jr. moved to Williamsburg, Va. in 1721; finished the Governor's Palace (as mentioned above), built the Brafferton Building, the President's House, and the Chapel (south wing of the Wren Building), all on the campus of William and Mary College there. A photo of a plaque over the inside of the Chapel's entrance door appears elsewhere in this book. The plaque lists his grandfather as "Miles Cary, Gent." Henry, Jr. also built the public gaol, the Magazine (according to some architectural authorities), also in Williamsburg; and several churches and court houses, among which are St. Paul's Hanover and St. John's Hampton, both in Virginia. A graduate of William and Mary College, Henry, Jr., was one of its earliest students; was a Justice of the Peace of Warwick Co., Va.; a vestryman of Bruton Church in Williamsburg (look for plaques naming him, one on the wall above his pew and the other at the pew entrance); and a keeper of the Magazines.

AMPTHILL

"Ampthill" was built in 1732, in Chesterfield County, opposite Richmond, near where the Appomattox River joins the James. In 1927, the E.I. du Pont de Nemours Co. bought "Ampthill" with the purpose of building a rayon mill on the site. Before proceeding, they donated the house to Mr. Hunsdon Cary, a lawyer of Richmond, Va., and a descendant of a son of Henry Cary named Miles (7). Hunsdon had the old house moved, brick by brick, and reerected on a hill overlooking the James River in Richmond.

When in Williamsburg in the spring of 1977 on a research trip for this book, we learned from Paul Buchanan, Head Research Architect at Williamsburg, that "Ampthill" was still standing and privately owned. We headed straight for Richmond to see and photograph it. He told us to also see "Wilton", a neighboring mansion which he believed to be a Henry Cary building, although other authorities disagreed. He could give us no definite directions, but a visit to the Virginia Historical Society in Richmond provided the information to get us there within a few minutes of their headquarters.

"Ampthill" is located on Ampthill Rd., just down from its intersection with Cary St. Rd. (named for Archibald Cary). We took the first photos at the juncture of Cary St. Rd. and Ampthill Rd., and also shot a plaque right by the street sign, explaining "Ampthill's" historical significance. These pictures appear elsewhere in this book.

Overwhelming in size, "Ampthill" looms up as you enter its long winding driveway through two huge iron gates. Privately owned by Mr. and Mrs. David Tennant Bryant, it is not open to the public; but we were given a tour because of the importance of this historic home to our genealogy. First we took some exterior pictures. It was impossible to get the entire house in center views because of the building's huge facade. All shots had to be taken at angles. Then we toured the interior, and had the exhilarating experience of being in this lovely mansion built by and lived in by our ancestor, Henry Cary, Jr. in the 1700's.

We learned that all the original second floor paneling had been removed by vandals while it sat, abandoned, in disrepair, in the pre-du Pont days, and that it was used as a brothel by American soldiers in WW I.

WILTON

The next stop after "Amphill" was "Wilton", the mansion that had been its neighbor on the James River. As mentioned above, although some architectural historians disagree, Paul Buchanan, Head Research Architect at Williamsburg, indicated that it is very likely that Henry Cary, Sr. was the builder. His opinion is based particularly on the back entrance doorway. Keep in mind, this is an elegant door facing the steet side (the front faces the James River). The entrance doorway of "Amphill" and that of "Wilton" are identical. (Photos of both appear elsewhere in this book). This Henry Cary building is open to the public and is the Museum and Headquarters of the National Society of the Colonial Dames of America in the Commonwealth of Virginia.

ARCHIBALD (8) CARY

Archibald, brother of Judith (8) Cary Bell, inherited the family home, "Amphill", and built "Bellmont" for Judith and her husband, David. ("Bellmont" is covered later in this section).

Archibald was called "The Wheelhorse of the Revolution" because of his great financial support and enthusiasm for the Colonial cause. The following items testify to his support for America's fight for independence and also tell of his great strength of character, which some think earned him a second sobriquet, "Old Iron." The following excerpts come from the BALTIMORE SUN, Nov. 25, 1906, "Virginia Heraldry" by Jane Griffith Keys. (Permission granted for reprint here).

Bishop Meade says of Archibald Cary: "He was among the very foremost patriots of Virginia. It was from his lips, as Chairman of the Committee of the Whole, that the words of the resolution of Independence of the Declaration of Rights and a plan of government first fell upon the public ear" ...

... Col. Archibald Cary married Mary, daughter of Richard Randolph, of Curles, and his wife, Miss Bolling, a descendant of Pocahontas... Mr. Grigsby says that this branch of the Cary family has been denominated the "Iron Carys" from the fact that Archibald Cary was called "Old Iron", either because of his capacity of physical endurance or his indomitable courage, or because he had an iron furnace and mill at Falling Creek... Cary's mill was burned by Colonel Tarleton, of the British Army, in the American Revolution of 1776.

THE BRUSH-EVERARD HOUSE

The following item documents that Henry Cary, Jr. lived in the "Brush-Everard House" in Colonial Williamsburg. It is reprinted here by permission of Colonial Williamsburg, Inc., from THE EIGHTEENTH-CENTURY HOUSES OF WILLIAMSBURG, by Marcus Whiffen, published by the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation:

pp. 108-109: When the house (Brush-Everard) was equipped with the woodwork that makes its interior one of the richest in that respect in the town is a matter for speculation. The character of this woodwork suggests a date in the second quarter of the century, and tempts one to suppose that it was installed during the ownership of the house by HENRY CARY, JR., the builder of the President's House at William and Mary. Of Cary's ownership we know only that it ended in 1742, when he sold the house to William Dering, a dancing master. . . .

"Bellmont", home of Judith Cary Bell, and her husband, David, built for them by Judith's brother, Archibald, is standing today, fully restored. It was owned by Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd A.W. Ownby and was for sale in the fall of 1979. Here is the description in the advertisement for its sale in the DAILY PROGRESS, Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 15, 1979. (Permission granted for reprint here).

The next item on "Bellmont" tells about the land on which it is built. It is from THE BELLS IN U.S.A. and ALLIED FAMILIES 1650-1977

by Getha Gina Bell, 1977:

David Bell joined by Joseph Bell, Archibald Cary, and Walter King were given a Land Grant of 60,000 acres along Peters Creek in Patrick County [now Buckingham Co.], Virginia, in 1748. Source: Researched by Mrs. Joan Farr from LDS Library, Salt Lake City, Utah.

The following information, from HISTORIC VIRGINIA HOMES AND CHURCHES by Robert A. Lancaster (J.B. Lippincott Co., Phila., Pa.) is reprinted by permission of Harper and Rowe, New York:

Tradition says that quaint Bellmont, in Buckingham County, was the first frame dwelling in that section of the country -- the pioneer settlers there having hitherto contented themselves with log-houses. Its dormer windows, little square porch and big chimneys are indications of its age. Ancient trees form an arch high above the house which looks sedately forth from a yard filled with old-fashioned shrubs and flowers. ... It was inherited by Colonel and Mrs. Bell's daughter, Mrs. Harrison, [probably Judith's third child, Sarah, who married Cary Harrison], who left it to her daughter, Mrs. Ligon. The Ligons sold it to Mr. I.C. Gannaway.

The Buckingham Co., Va. Courthouse burned, destroying all documents on our ancestor Judith Cary Bell and her husband, David, executed while they were living at "Bellmont." To prove Judith's generation for membership in patriotic organizations requiring ancestors in high colonial positions, such as her father and grandfather, Henry Cary, Jr. and Sr., and great-grandfather, Miles Cary, all of whom were members of the Va. House of Burgesses, the indenture agreement, which appears under "Cary Documents" in this section, is acceptable proof.

Here are excerpts from THE COURTHOUSE BURNED -- BUCKINGHAM COUNTY, by Margaret A. Pennington and Lorna S. Scott, by permission of the authors, courtesy of Jones Memorial Library, Lynchburg, Va.

From the Introduction:

A clipping from the Richmond Whig 1869: "Burning of the Buckingham C.H. and Clerk's Office. The work of an incendiary. The large and excellent courthouse building of Buckingham County, in the village of Maysville was last night burnt to the ground, the fire being discovered about one o'clock. NOT ONE PAPER WAS LEFT." ...

Buckingham was born a short time before the American Revolution. Thomas Jefferson, possibly the greatest of all Americans, had family ties in Buckingham. He influenced the architecture by designing the Courthouse and possibly influencing the design of Bellmont, a country estate of the Cary family.

From the main text:

. . . . The two wings are gone today and only the central portion remains. Arched doorways originally led from the central part to the wings. These arches are of brick and the chimneys from fireplaces in two adjoining rooms meet over the doorways. Their arrangement reminds one of the famous doorway at Ash Lawn, the home of James Monroe, which was designed by Thomas Jefferson.

The doors in the house are large and have six panels. Four of these doors are believed to have been imported from England. The windows are small paned and rather large.

Theodrick Gannaway was owner of this house at one time and it is believed that he, with several of his friends, planned the construction of Buckingham Female Institute during a conversation held in the room to the right of the main entrance.

A unique feature of this place was an underground spring. It was 17 steps down and was built with shelves so that milk and butter and meats could be stored in hot weather.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd A. Ownby own the property today and they prize the old trees and shrubs among which is a very old magnolia.

JUDITH (8) CARY BELL

Judith Cary Bell's portrait by Copley appears opposite page 58 in the CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY. Beneath it is written, "The original painting ... is in the possession of Major Gist Blair, Washington, D.C. The white rose in her hand is the emblem of the Cary family, as shown in the Cary Coat-of-Arms." Where could this portrait be found today?

The late Major Gist Blair's home is now Blair House, the President's guest house, across the street from the White House on Pennsylvania Avenue in Washington. Montgomery Blair, the father of Major Gist Blair, was the Postmaster General under Lincoln, and the Blair name is very well-known in the area of Silver Spring, Md., which borders on Washington, D.C. (The author's husband, Richard Warren Seltzer, Sr. grew up in that area. He graduated from Montgomery Blair High School, and his family home was closeby the Jessup Blair Mansion, Blair Park, and Blair Road.)

A search of the Washington, D.C. phone book turned up a Dr. Montgomery Blair, and a letter to that address brought a response from his widow, the former Augusta Virginia Mason, dated April 18, 1977. In the letter, she told that her daughter, Judith Cary Blair Green is the present owner of Judith Cary's portrait by Copley. The daughter now lives in Glendale, Ohio.

Mrs. Blair also put us in touch with her daughter, Elizabeth Blair Douglas of Victor, Montana, a Mormon and the genealogist of that family branch. Elizabeth supplied many family facts and put me in touch with another sister, Edith Draper Blair, Assistant Manager of Blair House, now under the aegis of the State Department.

MARY (SALLY) CARY AND GEORGE WASHINGTON

Washington Irving wrote about George Washington's first love, "Mary" Cary, and intimated that the General held affection for her throughout his life. We have unearthed still another version of this romance, written by Jane Griffith Keys, in her column, "Virginia Heraldry", in the Baltimore SUN, Dec. 9, 1906:

... The heroine of this pretty romance was Miss Mary Cary, daughter of Wilson Cary, Es. of Ceely's, Elizabeth City County, Va. Miss Cary, who afterward became the wife of Edward Ambler, son of Richard and Elizabeth Jaqueline Ambler, was at that time staying at the house of her sister, Mrs. George William Fairfax, when she captivated the affections of a young officer, who paid her his addresses and made an offer of his hand and heart, which were promptly rejected by Miss Cary. This young man afterward became known to the world as General George Washington, the first President of the United States.

Bishop Meade tells us that when young Washington asked permission of Mr. Cary to address his daughter "the reply of the old gentleman was, 'If that is your business here, sir, I wish you to leave the house, for my daughter has been accustomed to ride in her own coach.'"

[Bishop Meade goes on]... "It has been said that this answer of Mr. Cary to the stripling Washington produced the independence of the United States and laid the foundation of the future fame of the first of heroes and the best of men -- our immortal Washington -- as it is more than probable that had he obtained possession of the large fortune which it was known Miss Cary would carry to the altar with her, he would have passed the remainder of his life in inglorious ease."

CARY DOCUMENTS

of Elizabeth Cary (9) Bell to Daniel Bates and also the marriage of Elizabeth's parents, Judith (8) Cary and David Bell. Proof of these marriages is necessary to establish descendancy from Miles Cary, the original immigrant, for membership in a patriotic organization requiring a colonial ancestor in the seventeenth century who was an official in the government. Miles was a Member of the House of Burgesses of Virginia 1659-60, as documented by the Colonial Virginia Register, p. 17, and he was a Member of Council in 1665, documented by the same Register, p. 39.

From Bedford Co., Va., Deed Book 6, 1778-1780, Reel 3, pp. 240-241, the following "indenture" passes title of property from Henry Bell to his brother David Bell:

The CARY-ESTES GENEALOGY (1930) gives on p. 62 a series of references substantiating the marriage of Elizabeth Cary Bell to Daniel Bates. The items referenced to, however, contain no such information. In particular, as noted in the "Errata" of our reprint of that book, p. 243, the Chesterfield Co., Va., Deed Book 13, p. 449 was found to deal with a different marriage, that of Elizabeth's daughter, Judith Cary (10) Bates, to John Friend. The full text of that document follows:

THE BLAIR FAMILY

Judith (8) Cary married David Bell, and their daughter, Judith Cary (9) Bell married Col. Nathaniel Gist of Va., Revolutionary officer. Their daughter, Elizabeth Violet (10) Gist, married Francis Preston Blair. This Francis Preston Blair and his sons, Francis Preston (11) Blair, Jr. and Montgomery (11) Blair, are all prominent figures in American history. The following brief biographies of them come from the NEW COLUMBIA ENCYCLOPEDIA (1975). (Permission granted to reprint here).

BLAIR, FRANCIS PRESTON, 1791-1876, American journalist and politician, b. Abingdon, Va. Through the Frankfort, Ky., journal ARGUS OF WESTERN AMERICA, which he edited with Amos Kendall, Blair was an ardent supporter of Andrew Jackson. At William T. Barry's suggestion, he traveled to Wash. and established the Washington (D.C.) GLOBE in Dec., 1830, which exerted great political influence as the Jacksonian "court journal" until 1841. Along with Kendall, Blair also was one of the leading members of the Kitchen Cabinet. In Washington he also founded the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE (now the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD), in which the daily proceedings of Congress were recorded. When James K. Polk became President, Blair, a Van Buren Democrat, was forced to sell his interest in the Washington GLOBE to Thomas Ritchie. Later, because of his antislavery views, Blair was one of the founders of the Republican party, and he presided over its first national convention in 1856. In 1865 he engineered the futile HAMPTON ROADS PEACE CONFERENCE. An influential adviser to President Lincoln during the early years of the Civil War, he eventually returned to the Democratic party because he was opposed to radical Republicanism. See W.E. Smith, THE FRANCIS PRESTON BLAIR FAMILY IN POLITICS (1933); A.M. Schlesinger, Jr., THE AGE OF JACKSON (1945); B.J. Hendrick, LINCOLN'S WAR CABINET (1946).

BLAIR, FRANCIS PRESTON, 1821-75, American political leader and Union general in the Civil War, b. Lexington, Ky., son of Francis Preston Blair (1791-1876). A St. Louis lawyer, Blair led the Free-Soil party in Missouri in 1848, served as state legislator (1852-56), and as Congressman (1857-59); June, 1860; 1861-62. In Congress he attacked slavery as harmful to the interests of poor whites and became an energetic Lincoln supporter in 1860. Instrumental in keeping Missouri loyal to the Union by seizing, with Nathaniel Lyon, secessionist Camp Jackson and the U.S. arsenal early in 1861, he was appointed major general of volunteers (Nov. 1862) and served in the Vicksburg, Chattanooga, and Atlanta campaigns. After the Civil War, Blair was denied political preferment by the radical Republicans and in 1868 ran for Vice President on the unsuccessful Democratic ticket with Horatio Seymour. He helped overthrow the radicals in Missouri in 1870 and was elected to the state legislature, which, in turn, sent him to the U.S. Senate (1871-73). See W.E. Smith, THE FRANCIS PRESTON BLAIR FAMILY IN POLITICS (1933); B.J. Hendrick, LINCOLN'S WAR CABINET (1946).

BLAIR, MONTGOMERY, 1813-83, U.S. Postmaster General (1861-64), b. Franklin Co., Ky., son of Francis P. Blair (1791-1876). He resigned from the army 1836 after serving against the Seminole Indians and settled in St. Louis as the legal and political protege of Senator Thomas H. Benton. A successful lawyer and mayor of St. Louis (1842-43), he moved to Washington, D.C. where he was the first U.S. solicitor in the Court of Claims and made many appearances before the U.S. Supreme Court, including one as counsel for Scott in the famous Dred Scott Case. His antislavery views brought him to the Republican party, and he became Postmaster General in the Lincoln cabinet. To appease the radicals in the cabinet, the President forced his resignation before the election of 1864. Opposed to radical Republicanism, he returned to the Democratic party and was one of Samuel Tilden's counsel in the disputed election of 1876.

BLAIR FAMILY HISTORY & LEGENDS

The following legends come from the Appendix to OSCAR, THE RED-HEADED MOUSE, by Mrs. Carl H. Roeder of Silver Spring, Md. This is a book written for children about Washington and its environs. It gives a light touch and a sense of the people involved as human beings, rather than just cold historic facts. (Mrs. Roeder granted permission for reprinting this information here.)

FRANCIS PRESTON BLAIR, SR.

Francis Preston Blair, Sr. was friend, advisor, and confidant to Presidents Van Buren, Polk, Fillmore, Pierce, and Lincoln. He was a firm advocate of the solidarity of the Union and consistently opposed slavery. Friends from the North and South were equally welcome at his home...

THE SILVER SPRING MANSION

In 1844 the Honorable Francis Preston Blair, Sr., built a beautiful Mansion which he called "The Silver Spring" in Maryland, across the line from the District of Columbia. It was a three-story brick structure with twenty rooms, four baths, and nine fireplaces, each with a white marble mantle. President Lincoln visited in this home often with the Blairs and enjoyed resting by the cool waters that bubbled from the beautiful fountain-like Spring near the Mansion.

The name "Silver Spring" was given by Mr. Blair to his Estate because of the Spring he discovered with its silver-like waters that flowed unceasingly over a bed of rock and sun-kissed mica. Just HOW and WHY there was such a beautiful Mansion is a legend that has been handed down for almost one hundred fifty years. It was something like this:

Mr. Blair, who lived in the Blair House across the street from the White House in Washington, D.C., was riding one Spring morning with his daughter through the beautiful woodland and spacious meadows in Maryland just across the District of Columbia line when suddenly, without warning, the horse on which Miss Blair was riding lunged forward, throwing her from her saddle and broke into a hard, fast run. Mr. Blair, on his horse, Selem, recovered the runaway horse a short distance away, where it had stopped to drink from a Spring. Mr. Blair was enthralled by the silvery glint from the sun on the mica in the Spring. He said he had NEVER seen a Spring SO beautiful, and decided at once to buy all the land "as far as the eye could see" and build a home which he would call "The Silver Spring". So in 1844 the Honorable Francis Preston Blair built his dream home near the Spring. Subsequently there was an acorn-like dome place by the Spring with comfortable benches where many a President sat to rest and relax while visiting in the Mansion with the Blairs.

Mr. Blair spent his summers at this home and eventually his retirement years. The beautiful Mansion was razed in 1955 and the Blair Station an annex to the Silver Spring Post Office was erected on the site.

JESUP BLAIR HOUSE and JESUP BLAIR PARK

The Jesup Blair House was built by James Blair, second son of Francis Preston Blair, Jr. in Silver Spring, Maryland, just across the D.C. line at Georgia Avenue and Blair Road. The land was given by Francis Blair to his son, James, who was a sailor in the U.S. Navy. After he resigned from the service he went to California and put the first steamboat on the Sacramento River. During the gold rush he became wealthy transporting miners, freight and food on the River. Out of his wealth he built the Jesup Blair House -- which he named "The Moorings". He married Miss Jesup, daughter of General Jesup of the Seminole War. They had two children, Violet and Jesup. [There were four children. See listings.] James Blair died at the age of 35 years and his wife and children lived at the family home for the remainder of their lives. The home and estate was bequeathed to the State of Maryland by the will of Mrs. Violet Blair Janin with the request that the state maintain it as a community park. The name Jesup Blair was given the park in memory of her brother, Jesup Blair, born in 1842.

FALKLAND MANOR

This lovely 21-room Mansion, now destroyed, and its land occupied by modern apartments, was built by Montgomery Blair, Postmaster General in President Lincoln's Cabinet.

During the Civil War Falkland Manor was taken over and occupied by Gen. Jubal A. Early and his Confederate forces while planning an attack on Washington, D.C. When it was found by the Confederate forces that their plans for a successful attack on the Capitol City were defeated, they burned the Mansion, which was subsequently rebuilt by Mr. Blair.

There is a legend that the costly delay by General Early's Southern forces was lengthened when the Confederate troops found the well-stocked wine cellar at Falkland. The long pause in the wine cellar gave the Union Forces time to move into defensive positions at Fort Stevens and Washington, D.C. was saved.

NOTE — Coincidentally, the one Cary line in England that we were able to update in this book is that of the Viscount of Falkland, Lord Cary.

BLAIR MANSION INN

... In 1890, a descendant of the Pierce family (George Pierce granted land by King Charles II of England in 1685), Abner Shoemaker, gave twenty acres of this land to his niece, Abigail, and her husband, Charles Rider Newman, as a wedding gift. A home was built for the young couple on the northern corner of this tract which extended just over the District of Columbia boundary line into Maryland... The land bordering on the North and West belonged to the Blair family, after whom many landmarks in Montgomery County have been named. The warm friendship that developed between the two families made it seem fitting to name Abigail's dream house "Blair Mansion"...

GRACE EPISCOPAL CHURCH

... Among the early parishioners of Grace Church was Montgomery Blair, of Falkland Manor, President Lincoln's Postmaster General, whose descendants were active in Grace Church affairs for nearly a century.

THE BLAIR HOUSE

[Blair House] is a stately mansion built in 1824 by Surgeon General Joseph Lovell. It was purchased by Francis Preston Blair, in 1836, and became a gathering place of Presidents and diplomatic guests. Montgomery Blair, son of Francis Preston Blair, also lived in this house with his family. When Francis Preston Blair's daughter, Elizabeth, married Lt. Samuel Phillips Lee, her father built her a home adjoining the Blair House, hence the name "Blair-Lee House". The Blair family sold the home to the United States Government in 1942 for a modest sum.

MONTGOMERY BLAIR

... [Montgomery Blair] attended West Point and studied law with Thomas Hart Benton. He came to Washington in 1839, and as a lawyer... helped with the defense of John Brown of Harper's Ferry. On March 9, 1861 he was named as Postmaster General in Lincoln's Cabinet. He was active in Maryland political life and practiced law in association with his three sons, Gist, Montgomery, and Woodbury...

The Blair family has continued to distinguish itself in service to America in peace and in war. Blair (12) Lee, grandson of Preston Blair and Elizabeth Violet (10) Gist, served as a U.S. senator.

Blair Lee's son, E. Brook (13) Lee, served in WW I and was honored for his bravery, not only by the United States, but by France and Belgium. He served as a Maryland Secretary of State and as a Speaker of the Maryland House of Delegates.

E. Brook Lee's son, Francis Preston Blair (14) Lee, III, "Blair Lee", has been prominent in the Maryland political scene since 1949, and has served as Lt. Governor and as Acting Governor.

Phillips Blair (13) Lee, "Blair Lee", another grandson of Preston and Elizabeth Blair, was a Captain in WW I, served in the infantry overseas (1917-1919) and received the Purple Heart.

William Draper (14) Blair, Jr., a great-grandson of Montgomery Blair, Postmaster General under Lincoln, is at present the Deputy Asst. Secretary for Public Relations in the U.S. State Department.

CHARLES WARNER (7) WILSON, of Memphis, Tenn., researcher and compiler of the Moore segment of this genealogy.

Moore Listings

The Moore family segment of this book consists mainly of material researched and compiled by Charles Warner (7) Wilson and duplicated and distributed by him to family members, starting in January 1965, updated in December, 1976, and again in May 1978. The information from all three versions has been rearranged and edited and is used here with his permission. Charles Warner Wilson dedicated his work to the memory of his grandparents, Dr. Warner Moore and Mourning Ella Leak Moore.

It is highly probable that the name, "Moore", has its origin from the moors of Scotland, the place inhabited by the families of that name before they migrated from Scotland to Ireland and Wales during the reign of King James I of England (1603-1625). The English spelling, first used about five hundred years ago, is Moore; the Celtic is More; while the original Welsh is Mwr:

Sr. Thomas More (1478-1535) was an ancestor of the Moore Family here recorded. Richard Moore came to America on the Mayflower; James Moore was governor of South Carolina (1700-1702) and Maurice Moore and his son, Alfred, of North Carolina, were active in the Revolutionary War.

SHIELDS (1) MOORE. the original ancestor of record in America, immigrated to Maryland from Wales in 1725; md. Blandana Risdon; they later moved to N.C. There were several children, two of whom were: Smith W.; Risdon.

Risdon (2) Moore, b.—; d. 1779; md. (1)—; md. (2), in N.C., Mary Smith; they migrated to E. Tenn. in 1831. One of their children was: John.

John (3) Moore, b. 7 Feb. 1768; d. 8 Jan. 1846; md. 20 April 1797, Elizabeth "Eliza" Hill, dau. of Green Hill and his second wife, Mary Seawall, b. 22 Sept. 1777; d. 29 Apr. 1833. They had eleven children; among these were: Green; Mark, Calvin; Albert; John Risdon; Smith William.

Green Moore, the eldest, b. 1798; d. 1885; was a layman of the Lower Creek Bapt. Church, Lenoir, N.C. The next three sons, Mark, Calvin, and Albert, were Methodist preachers, John Risdon Moore, b. 1816; d. 1856; was a medical doctor; practiced first in Johnston Co., Tenn., later in Taylorsville, Maury Co., Tenn.

Smith William (4) Moore, b. 1 Nov. 1818, Stokes Co., N.C. d. 2 Feb. 1872, Whiteville, Tenn.; md. 24 July 1844, Giles Co., Tenn., the Rev. William Wilkes officiating, Mary Ordalia Yates, known as "Mary O.", dau. of Warner Mister Yates and Mildred Menefee, b. 29 Dec. 1820, Culpepper Co., Va.; d. 10 July 1906, Brownsville, Tenn.; both Smith William and Mary O. Yates are buried in Oakwood Cemetery, Brownsville, Tenn. After their marriage they lived at numerous places in middle Tenn., Northern Ala., Western Tenn., Ky. and Northern Miss.

Mary O. Yates Moore was an ideal minister's wife; was very prominent in the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church; appointed as one of a committee of two women to organize a Women's Foreign Missionary Society -- 1878 General Conference.

Smith William Moore moved with his family to East Tenn. when 13 years old; after his mother's death went to live with and worked as a clerk for his uncle, the Hon. Wm. Hill, Secretary of State of N.C., in Raleigh; there he was converted to Methodism at a revival, June 1837. Feeling the call to preach, he attended Randolph Macon College, Va.; matriculated there until 1842; was admitted to the Tenn. Conference in the fall of 1844; was ordained Elder by Bishop Soule of Nashville in 1846. The Tenn. Conference comprised north Miss., west Tenn., and west Ky. He was a Trustee of Vanderbilt Univ.; Co-Editor of the Christian Advocate; Agent of the Book Society of the Methodist Church in Memphis and President of these church colleges: Athens College, Athens, Ala., Bascom Female Seminary, Grenada, Miss., and Andrew College, Trenton, Tenn. Children: 1 John Warner; 2 Eliza Mildred; 3 Smith William, Jr.

1 John Warner (5) Moore, b. 12 June 1845; d. 3 Mar. 1909,

Ripley, Tenn.; bur. in Maplewood Cemetery; md. 17 Dec. 1868, at her plantation home, "Tippah Home", in Tippah Co., nr. Salem, Miss., the Rev. Wm. Wilkes officiating, Mourning Ella Leak, dau. of Col. Francis Terry and Martha Jane Malone Locke Leak. Col. Francis Terry Leak (about whom see more in the Leak Family section of this book) was a prominent wealthy plantation owner, with property and slaves both in Miss. and on the White River in Ark., Mourning Ella Leak d. 6 Sept. 1916, Paris, Tenn. She was reared in luxury, had her own body servants, and graduated from State Female College, Memphis, Tenn., but she selected the austere life of a Methodist preacher's wife. A dainty, small woman, beautiful of countenance, always immaculately groomed, her husband's pet name for her was, "M'Nell". This was the source of the name "Nell", given their oldest daughter. Mourning Ella Leak Moore's well-worn and favorite passage marked in her Bible eloquently expresses her prayer for her children, grandchildren, and all her descendants:

For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named, that he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his spirit in the inner man; that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith, that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length and depth, and height; and to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fullness of God. Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, unto Him, be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end. Amen. Ephesians 3:14-21

John Warner Moore, hereafter known as "Warner Moore", moved with his father and mother as they transferred from place to place; discontinued his studies at Southern Univ. to enlist in the Confederate Army at the start of the Civil War; joined an artillery unit, the Stanford Battery. At enlistment he had to choose between being known as John W. or Warner Moore, selected the latter, and continued using this name on into his civilian life. He was wounded three times felt the call to the ministry, and after the war pursued this career, becoming Warner Moore, A.M., D.D., Ph. D. He was admitted to the Memphis Conference at Jackson, Tenn.; ordained Deacon at the Annual Conference, Paducah, Ky.; and was made an Elder at Paris, Tenn., Nov. 1869. His first pastorate was the Coldwater, Miss. circuit; and he served from the smallest to the largest churches in this conference for almost forty-five years. Besides being a pastor, he was Presiding Elder (now called District Superintendent) of several Districts; served as Conference Secretary and was a delegate to the General Conference. A devout Christian gentleman of the highest caliber, universally respected and loved by all who knew him, or knew of him, Warner Moore deeply loved all his kinfolk from the closest to the most distant cousins. A handsome, stalwart man, he was also a hunter, a fisherman, a musician, a Mason, and a Shriner. His grave is marked by a splendid monument, erected out of love by the people of Ripley, Tenn. Symbolic of his life and his Godlike faith is the inscription on the stone, his last earthly words: "I have taken my soundings, my faith holds."

Moore History & Connections

The "Moore Family History and Family Connections" was compiled by Charles Wilson, of Memphis, Tenn., with the exception of some supplementary items on Green Hill, a very prominent Moore ancestor of colonial times. Some items have been edited and rearranged.

The marvelous, up-lifting faith of the Moore family permeates these items chosen from Charles Wilson's comprehensive collection of historical and documentary data. The eulogies written about Charles' grandparents, the Rev. Dr. Warner (5) Moore and his wife, Mourning Ella Leak Moore, are testimony to their strong Christian faith. It never faltered, even on their death beds.

Warner Moore's mother, Mary Ordalia Yates, "Mary O" brought the Yates family into the Moore line and also the Masons of Virginia. We included a brief history of the Yates family.

Green Hill was an illustrious figure. A founding father of the Methodist Church, he was a major in the Revolutionary War, and took part in the first meeting in the colonies to plan for independence. There are three long articles on him, each of which gives a little more information on the same event: the First Annual Conference of Organized Episcopal Methodism.

Mourning Ella Leak, Warner Moore's paternal grandmother, came from a life of ease and wealth on a large plantation. She sacrificed it all gladly to become the wife of an itinerant preacher. There is a family history, some statistics from the family Bible and a chart giving the wives and children of Mourning Ella Leak's grandfather.

John Warner (5) Moore, "Warner Moore" was the brother of Eliza Mildred (5) Moore, who married Dr. Louis Powhatan Estes, connecting the two families. He was nurtured in the Methodist faith throughout his life. His father, Dr. Smith William (4) Moore was a Methodist minister, who felt the call to preach while he was serving in the Confederate forces during the Civil War. After the war, he studied for the ministry and quicl Warner Moore felt the call to preach while serving in the Confederate forces during the Civil War. After the war, he studied for the ministry and quickly rose in the ranks of the church, becoming a deacon, then an elder, and received an honorary Doctor of Divinity from Southern University. His personal record from his Bible is copied here, including the schedule of his travels, to give some idea of the grueling life he led to spread the Gospel.

Two eulogies are included here because each one honors Warner Moore in a different way for different qualities.

EULOGY TO DR. WARNER MOORE

by W.T. Bolling, D.D.

I desire to pay my tribute to the memory of my friend:

He filled his place ever with credit to himself and his Church as an itinerant preacher, serving circuits, stations, and districts; and on his record there is not a single blot. Dr. Moore had a vigorous and well-furnished mind, trained to thought; and his convincing logic and earnest style won for him the attention of his audiences and especially the more cultured.

In the home he was the genial companion and ever Christian gentleman, pleasant, cordial, but never indulging in the familiarity which among cultured people "breeds contempt;" and from his lips fell no word which was not chaste and worthy to be uttered in any company, even in the presence of purest womanhood. He was a modest man, never given to self-seeking in any degree, and hence he did not occupy always the place his talent and ability deserved. His was a character molded of that element which "vaunted not itself and is not puffed up," but withal a massive character, which, like a mountain peak, rose granite-based and symmetrical from base to summit, crowned with the golden light of spiritual beauty.

He was as tender as a woman, stern as a Roman senator, and immovable when principle was involved. He was a Christian soldier, courteous as Bayard, and yet as brave as Coeur de Lion; and with what he believed to be wrong he made no compromise, governed by principle and a stranger to all questionable policy. Genuine himself as purified gold, he had no alloy in his make-up; and hence, loving the genuine, he despised a sham; and as steady as the North Star in his friendship, he made no pretense in relation to one in whom he could not believe.

I know no richer legacy than for forty years Warner Moore was my friend; and, knowing me as he did, in the light of our unbroken friendship, I find a comment which I value beyond all the wealth the world could make in relation to me. Two years ahead of me in the Conference, he gave me welcome when I came in; and from that day unto this our friendship remained unbroken; and that silent form both held a soul of one whom I loved as brother in the flesh and in Christ; and hence I came to lay a brother's tribute at his coffin in the last rites over the body which held as Kingly a soul as ever blessed the world and left it to make it poorer and give added wealth to the realm of light beyond the mystic sea. Stricken suddenly, with no warning, of the coming end his life, so open, so consistent, becomes the guarantee of his perfect readiness to answer the call of the Master: "Come up higher."

The sun has gone down, but has left its golden glow upon the clouds; and while love sits with tear-dimmed eyes, she sees the afterglow of blessed promise and in her sobbing agony chants the measures of consolation's anthem and looks with hope beyond the coffin and the clay. When the end came, to the faithful woman who through sunshine and shadow had ever walked by his side, he said: "I know I am going; I have sounded the depth, and my faith holds." So as he had come to St. Paul, the enemy, death, came to our brother. But the Christian soldier was on post, armed with faith and ready. Like another -- a dying poet -- he could say:

And now the bitterness of death is past.

This soul's untwisting is the last.

Angels bring near the chariot; my work is done;

Step in my soul; the battle is fought, the victory's won.

APPRECIATION OF DR. WARNER MOORE

by J.W. Blackard, D.D.

"Ulysses is off on his wanderings and there is not one in Ithaca who can draw his bow."

I am deeply grieved at the going away of my old time friend Dr. Warner Moore. My first real acquaintance with him began in 1886 when he became my presiding elder. Although he was my senior by a number of years and my superior in rank and otherwise too as for that - nevertheless our acquaintance grew to warm personal friendship which has known no break through all of these years until death severed the golden cord. Ah, I am wrong in the exception. Death has separated us, but has not broken our friendship. Somewhere past the grave and beyond the "sunset's radiant glow" there shall be a meeting and the golden cords which have bound us in the past shall bind us there. Love and friendship are eternal.

Warner Moore was a born gentleman, a choice spirit. He missed greatness only by a small margin. Nay, wrong again; he did not miss greatness. He missed the wide celebrity and the applause that come to many great men; but he was truly great -- great in faith, great in patience, great in love, great in friendship. No man was more devoted to his friends than he.

This scribe had a long letter from him just a little while ago in which he spoke pathetically about the loneliness that sometimes came to him at conference when he could see none of the "old guard," Johnson, Harris, A.R. Wilson and others. He did not say so but he was doubtless feeling a little homesick for heaven, knowing not that he was nearing the time to join the "old guard" beyond the river. His life work is done. His gentle, brave, spirit has gone. We shall see his face no more in this world nor hear his voice. He will not answer the roll call at conference. He has been "transferred" by our Great Bishop to a larger and better field. We who knew him intimately and loved him will miss him oh, so much. Who can fill his place in our hearts? When shall we see his like again?

He was a man of many gifts and many noble qualities. He was capable of filling any position in the gift of the church, yet he was always content to work where ever he was assigned.

He was generous to a fault and self-sacrificing, always preferring others to himself. In a recent letter to this writer he was unfolding some of his plans and added: "This will not benefit me personally. My day has past but I am working for our younger men, such as yourself."

It has been fifteen years since he traveled the Paducah District as presiding elder, but his tracks here are still many and his friends legions. There has perhaps never been a presiding elder among us whose preachers loved him more than did the preachers in Moore's District. He had no porcupine quills but took the humblest brother close to his heart. The now sainted Newell once said to this writer that the unfeigned love displayed between Moore and the preachers of his district at one of his District Conferences was one of the most beautiful things he had ever seen on the earth.

May his mantle fall upon his sons and the blessings of God be with his faithful widow and the memory of his noble life be cherished by his brethren in the conference till we all meet in that land where the rainbow never fades and the flowers bloom eternally!

MOURNING ELLA LEAK MOORE (md. Warner (5) Moore)

A TRIBUTE TO SISTER MOORE

Written by Mrs. Lillie McSwain Foreman shortly after Grandmother Moore's death in September, 1916.

I cannot remember when I did not have the utmost respect and love for a minister and his family. My early training, by the best father and mother that ever lived, taught me that a minister was called of God. He was set apart from other men, he was Christ's representative here and he and his were to be honored. So one November evening about 20 years ago when with some friends I was standing in a store on the Square "wondering what our new preacher looked like" a perfectly splendid looking, tall, broadshouldered, white haired man stepped in the door and introduced himself as Dr. Warner Moore, our new pastor, who with his genial smile and pleasant manner won the hearts of the crowd of young people in a few minutes. And later when I went into the home and met his dear, sweet wife and splendid family my old standard of the minister and his home was raised higher. There began at that time an association with his family as friends and neighbors that has lasted through these 20 years, and the bond of love that exists between these friends and myself is second only to that of my own by blood and to try to speak of this good woman as a friend is next to trying to say something of what my own Mother is to me. Sister Moore, as I've always called her, was raised in a Southern home where a servant was at hand to do even to the very smallest service. As a girl she never knew anything of housekeeping and its many, many duties. Just a little dainty needlework and embroidery was the most practical knowledge she had of housekeeping. But like the true great woman she was, as I have so often heard her say, "If you love your husband and home and want to learn, you certainly can." And she surely mastered the art of homemaking and housekeeping.

Her love for her husband and his work was second only to that of the Master she served and in all his 40 years of labor in the Methodist Church, he found in her a strong support. Altho many, many times in the early itinerant work, when even the very barest necessities were not available, she never waived in her faith and purpose and I doubt if she ever spoke of it until years later, when in conversation we would ask questions of her or possibly complain and feel like we were having a hard time. Then she would speak of some of these experiences of hers and it would put us to shame. To tell of the sacrifices she made to rear her family of six children, to care for them in the home, cook, sew, keep up with the many demands they made on her time and strength and still keep up with the work required and expected of her as a minister's wife would take hours and a vocabulary that is not mine to command. For then not only did it mean the work of a minister's wife of today, but actually to go into the homes and nurse day and night and for hours and hours try to lessen the pain and one time actually taking home with her for a while a tiny babe whose mother's life went out to give it birth. Such things came into her life to make up the sacrifices of years of labor throughout the Methodist Conference, for their pastorates were from the circuit with many appointments and few dollars to the very highest appointments in the Memphis Conference and then from small church to large and large to small; yet never a murmur as to change. To her God guided the Bishop and his Cabinet in making these appointments and it was her prayer to the end that He would always do so. I could write pages and then not halfway tell of the sacrifices of those years as a Minister's wife. Were they sacrifices to her? No; it was her pleasure "For she was about her Master's business."

May I speak of her home life? All who knew the loving husband and wife felt that their lives were ideal. Just during her last illness a friend of hers said to me in her home "I always thought they were an ideal couple." How she loved Dr. Moore and when he was taken from her seven years ago, almost that gentle spirit followed his, for hours her children thought she would never regain consciousness. And when she did her question was "Oh, why didn't You let me go too?" And from that time on, although she met bravely the battles of life without him, still she only lived for the call to come to take her home. And in these years, with her needle and thimble and scissors, with her crochet and tatting, I've spent hours listening to her sweet voice as she told me of so many, many blessings that had been hers. How her faith was made stronger each day, how good her children were to her, how true God's word was. I never went to her with a burdened heart that I did not come away comforted. "Have more faith" she would so often say to me. Friend? I thank God for such a friend. She was always thoughtful of her friends. Altho during all these years she suffered physically, she never complained and when I'd stop in and ask "How are you?" "All right for me" would be her answer. The flowers that are around her little home speak of her love of the beautiful and for two years she has been planting these flowers that would, to use her words, "Would be there to bloom for Nell when I'm gone." And how many, many times she sent to sick friends some of those beautiful flowers and a message of love with them and even just a few days before she went away, she had some carried to two of her friends who were sick, always thinking of someone else.

Can you imagine how her children loved her? And how she loved them? Always interested in them and in their families and in their work. Their joys and sorrows were truly hers and when sorrow came into the homes of those away from her, she always forgot her own suffering to go to them, or if she could not go herself, sent such messages of comfort as only a loving mother could send. And just a few weeks ago, when her soldier boy telephoned from Memphis that the physician had just told him that his wife could live only a few hours, she said "O! How gladly I would go in Corrie's place. Albert needs her and her little children need her, but God knows best." And again when racked with pain she said "I do not know why I am spared, but I would not presume to tell God when it is time for me to go, I only pray that I may be patient and have strength to bear the pain." And surely God gave her both, for during those last three weeks, when she was unable to take a morsel of food or drink, save a little water, and was continually in pain, she never murmured. And in the midst of this physical agony, when she would speak at all, she would begin "Bless the Lord! O my soul and all that is within me bless His Holy Name," or "The Lord is merciful and gracious, slow to anger and plenteous in mercy." And day or night when she could be heard at all, her voice was lifted to Him for His many blessings.

During these weeks it was beautiful to see the devotion of her children who ministered to her. Altho there seemed nothing could be done to ease that pain, still day and night those three stalwart sons and two daughters worked untiringly, trying to make her more comfortable, and always she would think of them and tell each one, "You must get some rest, you will wear yourself out," and to another, "You must not stand so long, your little baby will need you, go rest a while." To me, the last time her face lighted up with pleasure when I entered the room, she said "You must not come so often, you will tire yourself out and Nell will need you later on." And again late into the night, when I gave her some water, she looked up with that sweet smile, "Haven't I driven you home yet?" Unselfish? Yes to the end. How her prayer reached out to her oldest son, a Preacher out in Texas, who was deprived of the pleasure of being with his Mother in these last hours. But the assurances of love and faith growing stronger each day, that came to her from him, made her face light up with pleasure and from her lips came the blessing "The Lord bless him and keep him faithful and bring him safe home." And then the grandson, whom she had reared as her own and whom she had loved so tenderly, because as she said he had never known a Mother's love, to him, down on the Mexican border, went those last letters of loving advice and back came the answer "I expect to live so that I'll meet you in Heaven." These years of sacrifice were bringing in their harvest. For days before she went away after she had gotten too weak to finish her scripture, she would look at her Preacher boy, who was with her, and would take up the passage and finish it for her, and when nothing else seemed to quiet her, she would listen to his voice, as he repeated to her these blessed promises on which her whole life had been built and her spiritual triumph over the physical was complete. And the last morning we had her with us, I shall never forget the scene it was my privilege to witness, for truly these things bring us near the Eternal Truth. One who for days and days had been coming to sing for her the hymns she loved, was sitting by her singing "We Are Almost Home" and truly Sister Moore must have heard those voices on the Other Shore singing, for when the song was finished, again came that voice, almost a whisper "Bless the Lord."

And in a few hours the Life that for years had been shut in,

"Shut in, shut in from the ceaseless din
Of the restless world, and its want and sin;
Shut in from its turmoil, care and strife,
And all the wearisome round of life.

Shut in with tears that are spent in vain,
With the dull companionship of pain;
Shut in with the changeless days and hours,
And the bitter knowledge of failing powers.

Shut in with the dreams of days gone by,
With buried joys that were born to die;
Shut in with hopes that have lost their zest,
And leave but a longing after rest.

Shut in with a trio of angels sweet:
Patience and Grace all pain to meet,
With Faith that can suffer and stand and wait,
And lean on the promises, strong and great.

Shut in with Christ! Oh, wonderful thought!
Shut in with the peace his sufferings brought;
Shut in with love that wields the rod;
Oh, company blest! Shut in with God."

this spirit went Home triumphantly to be in His Presence.

Sister Moore as a friend? I feel that I have not finished until I tell you that we carried her to Ripley to have her little body there by Dr. Moore. And that there we found scores of friends with their beautiful flowers to bring with them their messages of love to the living and pay their last tribute of love to this dear, good woman who had lived with them.

Smith William (4) Moore married MARY ORDELIA YATES, "Mary O", daughter of Warner Mister Yates, who was the son of Charles and MARY MASON YATES, sister of GEORGE MASON of Gunston Hall, Lorton, Va.

THE YATES FAMILY

Warner M. (Mister) Yates, the son of Charles and Mary Mason Yates, was born in Virginia on April 27, 1795. There is a record showing him as being named "William Mason Warner Minor Yates", but later accounts show him as being Warner M. Yates. Mary Mason Yates was, [by family tradition] a sister [but possibly the niece of] George Mason of Virginia (1725-1792) author of the Declaration of Rights adopted by Virginia Convention of May, 1776, and later used by Thomas Jefferson as a basis for the Bill of Rights added to the original Federal Constitution as amendments. He was also a sponsor of George Rogers Clark's expedition to the Northwest Territories.

Warner M. Yates married Mildred Menefee in Virginia on December 30, 1819. Rev. Lewis Conner performed the ceremony.

Warner M. and Mildred Menefee Yates had 11 children, they being:

Ordalia Mary Frances Yates born in Culpepper County, Virginia, on December 29, 1820. She was our great-grandmother, and was known as Mary O. Yates.

Carolina (Carrie) Matilda Yates, born August 26, 1822. She married Benjamin Hendron on May 23, 1838, Reb. H.H. Brown officiating. They moved from Columbia, Tenn., to Grenada, Miss. in 1853, where Mr. Hendron died in 1856. They had two daughters, one of whom later married Dr. C.P. Levy of Trenton, Tennessee. On Jan. 16, 1872 Carrie married Rev. A.T. Scruggs, a Methodist Minister and a physician. They lived in Tennessee and Missouri. She died in Grenada on Oct. 2, 1879. Dr. Scruggs was born July 18, 1815 and died July 23, 1880.

C. Jane Elizabeth Yates, born August 29, 1824. She married William I. Short on January 3, 1844.

John Randolph Yates, born June 12, 1826.

Virginia Tennessee Yates, born July 2, 1828.

Robert William Yates, born July 30, 1830. He married Laura Reavy, daughter of Dr. Reavy of Texas. She was widowed and later married a Mr. Yarrington.

Sarah Goodloe Yates, born January 26, 1833. She was married to John P. Mitchel on February 28, 1854, Rev. S.W. Moore officiating.

Catherine (Kate) Barbour Yates, born April 27, 1835. She was married to Major J.K. Connelly on Oct. 18, 1855, by the Rev. M. Colbuin. She later married Capt. G.P. Lake of Mississippi and died near Elliott, Miss. March 27, 1876.

Charlie Edward Yates, b. Mary 19, 1839.

Mildred Warner Yates, born Jan. 19, 1842. Died at age of 12.

Clay Yates, born Oct. 24, 1844. He died December 9, 1848.

The family moved to Giles County, Tennessee sometime in 1833. Warner M. Yates was known as a scholar and educator in and about Pulaski, Giles County, Tennessee. He must have died sometime in mid 1861. This based upon a letter written to Smith William Moore by Charlie Yates dated Sept. 2, 1861. It is evident that Mildred Menefee Yates continued to live until the close of the Civil War and after, mention being made of "Grandmother" in letters Warner Moore wrote his parents while he was in Confederate forces, the last one bearing date of April 7, 1865.

Mary O. Yates married Smith William Moore in Pulaski, Giles County, Tennessee, on July 24, 1844. There were 3 children, Warner, Lily and Smith William, Jr., who died in infancy. Mary O. Yates died in Haywood County, Tennessee, July 10, 1906, and was buried in Brownsville, Tenn.

Smith William (4) Moore was the son of John (3) Moore, who married ELIZA HILL.

THE GREEN HILL FAMILY

A history of the Green Hill family gives details on the family members and tells of their activities in North Carolina and then in Tennessee where our ancestor, Green Hill, Jr. emigrated in the late 1700's. They were very active in the founding of the Methodist Church, first in North Carolina and then in Tennessee.

ELIZA HILL, the wife of John Moore, the mother of Smith William Moore, was a daughter of Green Hill, Jr. and his second wife Mary Seawall Hill. Although after her marriage she joined the Baptist church with husband John Moore, it is evident that her father's zeal in behalf of the Methodist Church influenced her life. Of the eleven children they had, several were Baptist preachers, while several, at least two were Methodist preachers, such as Mark Moore and our own ancestor, Smith William Moore, who was the youngest son. Also John Risdon Moore, a doctor, was a Methodist.

Elizabeth (Eliza) Hill Moore, was a great granddaughter of Robert Hill, who with his wife, Mary, emigrated to Virginia in 1642, they being property owners in Isle of Wight County, Va. Among their children was Richard Hill (1684-1724) who married Hannah Briggs about 1713. Of their four children, the oldest was Green Hill, Sr., of Surrey County, Va. He inherited from his father 300 acres of land, which he sold as soon as he came of age. Green Hill then moved to Bertie (later Northampton) County, North Carolina. There he bought land, met and married Grace Bennett, daughter of early settlers and substantial land owners on the north side of the Roanoke River in Northampton County. The marriage was in 1739. Green Hill, Sr., a faithful churchman of the Anglican Church, prospered in cultivation of his land and was known as one of the most substantial citizens of the region. They had four sons and five daughters; two of the sons were distinguished members of North Carolina Legislative Assemblies. One of the sons was GREEN HILL, JR. born Nov. 8, 1741. He was married two times, first to Nancy Thomas; they had five children; she died after nine years. He then married MARY SEAWALL, the mother of eight children including, ELIZA HILL. They lived in a large three story house on the outskirts of Louisburg, N.C. located on ample acreage to support the large family. Green Hill had slaves who tilled his acreage. Although he was born into the Anglican Church, when he was about thirty, he joined the Methodist Church and was a life-long friend of Bishops Asbury and Coke, pioneers in the American development of the Methodist Church.

On April 20, 1785, the first Annual Conference in America of the Methodist Episcopal Church was held in the attic (later called "Liberty Hall") of Green Hill's home, "Moorland", also known as "Green Hill House", near Louisburg, N.C. Prior to this time, Green Hill had been ordained a Methodist preacher. This conference embraced a territory covering Virginia and North and South Carolina. Twenty preachers from thirty-one circuits were present, all finding room to sleep on the floor of the house and being entertained by the Hills. It was reported that since December 1784, 991 members had been added to the church and the work of the Methodist Church had been extended into Georgia. For the first time, to have such an officer, Phillip Bruce was named Presiding Elder. Subsequently, at least three more Annual Conferences were held in the home of Green Hill and his wife Mary Seawall Hill.

Just a little prior to the State of Tennessee being created out of the western part of North Carolina, the Governor granted to Green Hill large acreage in territory that is now Williamson County, Tn., near Brentwood. In 1796, Green Hill and his wife made a brief trip to look over the land he had been granted and to decide if he wanted to move his family there. This was, to say the least, an arduous trip, mountains and hills - no roads. Some three years later the Green Hill family left their comfortable home and acreage in North Carolina to move to their new home at Brentwood, a long and dangerous journey through Cumberland Gap, over rivers, creeks, mountains, reaching finally the little village of Lebanon, Tn., a brief stop for rest there, before journeying on to their land at Brentwood. There he built a home, named it "Liberty Hill", and also, nearby, built a church named "Liberty Hill Methodist Episcopal Church."

Always Green Hill continued to preach at every opportunity afforded him. He and his wife continued to entertain the annual Methodist Conferences. The first Annual Conference of Tennessee in the fall of 1808 - Bishop Wm. McKendree's first conference, was held at the Hill's, the family entertaining some 70 circuit riding preachers for a week. The guests stayed in his house, in the hay barns and other shelter on his land, all being fed by his wife and children.

Green Hill continued to preach the gospel, as well as enlarging his farming interests. He was ever in the forefront in organizing new congregations and assisting in construction of new church buildings. Incidentally, he was a prominent Mason from his early days in North Carolina. Mary Seawall Hill died March 29, 1821. (She was born in North Carolina August 1, 1751, the daughter of Col. Ben J. Seawall.) The Rev. Green Hill died Sept. 11, 1826. They are buried in the Hill family Cemetery, located just off Concord Road in the 16th District of Williamson County, Tn. It is the property of and maintained by the Tennessee Conference of the Methodist United Church and identified by a historical marker erected by the Tennessee Historical Commission.

THE FIRST ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF ORGANIZED EPISCOPAL METHODISM

At the beginning of 1785 there were fewer than eighteen thousand Methodists in America. There were hardly one hundred preachers. Coke had been sent by John Wesley across the Atlantic. The famous Christmas Conference of 1784 had been held and Episcopal Methodism, altogether independent of the Established Church, had become an organized force. The time had come for the holding of the first Annual Conference of organized Episcopal Methodism. The place had been selected. There was no directory showing the homes of the preachers. There was no need of any directory. There was only one home for all the preachers, and that was the home of Green Hill. It was one of those plain, story-and-a-half houses so common at that day. Yet then it was considered a mansion. It was built of massive timbers, having five rooms in the basement, four on the second floor and two in the attic. It still stands in a remarkable state of preservation.

Green Hill was married twice. Both wives were wealthy and represented the best blood in the State. So he enjoyed not only acquired wealth but inherited wealth. He was a large slave holder... Green Hill married (1) Nancy Thomas, on October 13, 1763; [there were five children of this marriage]... Green Hill was married (2) to Mary Seawell [also spelled "Seawall"], daughter of Hon. Benjamin Seawell of Old Bute County, N.C. The children of this marriage were Green Hill, III, who died in Alabama, leaving a large family of children; Lucy Hill, who married Rev. Joshua Cann. (They moved to Tennessee and settled in Williamson County, leaving a number of descendants, and John Hill [our ancestor, whose daughter Eliza, married John Moore]; Thomas Hill, who, having married... settled in Rutherford County, Tenn., and died in Haywood County, leaving one son, Richard Hill, who afterwards became a Methodist preacher; Joshua Hill, who moved with his father to Tennessee and afterward married Lemiza Lanier of Beaufort County, N.C. He was a local preacher in the Tennessee Conference, but died young in 1827, leaving a son, John L. Hill who for years was a member of the Tennessee Conference. The daughter of Joshua C. Hill married Rev. William Burr of Tennessee Conference. A descendant is Mrs. Laura Burr Ferguson, widow of the late Gen. F.D. Ferguson of Birmingham, Ala. In Mrs. Ferguson's possession is the original Bible of Green Hill...

The United Methodist Historical Society of Northern Virginia supplied the following material and gave permission for its use in this book. The material comes from GREEN HILL, by Thomas Neal Ivey, edited with genealogical note by J. Edward Allen, (privately printed).

Green Hill, the second... was the son of the elder Green Hill, the earliest member of the Hill family of whom there is available any authentic information... his father was Robert Hill of Halifax County. The first Green Hill was a prominent citizen of the state, public-spirited and influential. Grace Bennett, wife of the elder Green Hill, was the daughter of "William Bennett, Gentleman," of Northampton County, North Carolina.

The records of Blandford Bute Lodge of Masons, which were rediscovered in 1914, show that this lodge was in existence as early as 1766. They show that Green Hill, Henry Hill, and William Hill, were members of the lodge. These lodges were, during the Revolutionary period, really Committees of Deliberation on the State of the Country, and, therefore, the minutes cease for the period of the war.

When the first Colonial Assembly of North Carolina, described as the first popular Convention of any Colony in America, was held in New Bern on August 25, 1774, Green Hill was among the delegates present. It is declared that no such Convention had ever preceded this in America, except by royal authority or approval. It met in defiance of the Crown and its royal Governor and his proclamations, there being seventy members present, representing almost all of the thirty-five counties.

Chief Justice Clark, editor of the North Carolina Colonial Records, said of this Convention that it "never had a superior from that day to this, and doubtless never will in all time to come. Scarcely a name prominent in the annals of the day is wanting."

The second Provincial Congress was held at Hillsboro, on August 25, 1775, and Green Hill was again present.

Green Hill, the elder, had four sons and four daughters. Facts are available from a number of sources, among these being two Hill Bibles. One of these was formerly owned by Mrs. Mary Foy, or Ivy, of St. Louis; the other is now owned by Mr. Hill Ferguson, of Birmingham, Alabama. The four sons were Henry, born in 1740; Green, born in 1741; Bennett, born in 1745; William, born in 1750. The daughters were Mary, born in 1754; Sarah, born in 1756; Temperance, born in 1761, and Elizabeth, born in 1763. All of these married and had large families, their descendants being found in practically every Southern state today.

YIELDING TO THE CALL OF PATRIOTISM

The first Provincial Assembly in North Carolina was made up of delegates elected by the people... It was the first assembly of the people of North Carolina in a representative character in opposition to the Royal King. It is not strange to find as a delegate to this great meeting our local Methodist preacher, Green Hill. He ... [was a delegate] from Bute County, which will ever be known in North Carolina as the county in which there were "no Tories". It would have been as difficult for Green Hill to refrain from participating in this conflict as from becoming a local preacher of Methodism after the great light had broken into his soul. That constructive element in his nature with the strong ethical impulse made him a forceful leader in the ranks of those who established the American Republic and in the ranks of the white bannered host that established American Methodism.

The Second Provincial Congress met at New Bern on April 3, 1775... There is record of Green Hill's having been a member of this Second Provincial Congress. The Third Provincial Congress met at Hillsboro on the 20th of August, the same year. At this Congress momentous action was taken severing relationship with the Crown. A kind of provincial government was established, an army was placed in the field and provision was made for the issue of necessary currency. Green Hill was a member of this Third Provincial Congress. He was appointed to serve on one of the most important committees -- that of Privileges and Elections...

Green Hill was a member of the Fourth Provincial Congress which met in April, 1776, at Halifax, as was also his brother-in-law, Benjamin Seawell (spelled Seawall elsewhere). The crowning work of this Congress was to affirm the province's absolute independence of the mother country. Thus North Carolina led all the colonies in affirming this independence. At this Congress Green Hill received a military title -- that of Major of the Militia. He was known later in life as "Colonel Hill", but if he received any other title than Major I have not been able to find the record. He was placed on a committee to regulate the militia... He was also designated as one of the signers of the bills of credit issued by Congress. The highest testimony to his influence and ability was his appointment on a committee to prepare a civil constitution...

Green Hill... [was] an active member of the Assembly of 1777. He represented Franklin County in the Assembly of 1779. Bute County was no more. From it had been formed Franklin and Warren Counties. In this Assembly of 1779 he presented a bill for making better provision for the poor, and so far as records show he was the pioneer in the movement to establish public institutions for the indigent in the Old North State.

In 1781 Green Hill enlisted as Chaplain of the 10th regiment, Sharp's Company, and saw service the same year as far west as Salisbury, when our armies were on a retreat.

On November 30, 1782, the Treaty of Paris was signed and American independence was a fact forevermore. It would seem that the time had come for Green Hill to retire to his large landed estate on the Tar near Louisburg, the county seat of Franklin, and leave others to assume the burden of public duties. He had taken a strenuous and prominent part in establishing the independence of his State and the country. But the idea of retirement had not entered his mind. It was unsuited to his temperament. He was only a little over forty years old. He was too useful a man to cease his functions as a burden bearer. In 1783 he was elected Treasurer for the District of Halifax... He was also elected one of the Councillors of State, which position he continued to hold until some time in 1786, as is shown in a letter written him by Governor Caswell.

John Warner (5) Moore, "Warner Moore", grandson of John (3) Moore and Eliza Hill, married MOURNING ELLA LEAK.

THE LEAK FAMILY

The history of the Leak family is fascinating, particularly the life of Col. Francis Terry Leak, father of Mourning Ella, a child to his third wife, Martha Jane Malone (Locke), formerly a widow. The Colonel had a price placed on his head as a result of his staunch support of the Confederate cause. He was forced to flee to the deep south to hide from the Union Forces, where he died, far away from home and loved ones.

The family record of Col. Francis Terry Leak contains much data on the family, and then a chart lists his three marriages and his children.

The earliest record of the Leak family shows that William Leak came over from England and located in Goodland Co., Virginia, in 1685. This William Leak married Mary Bostick. Although it is not clear, it must be that they had a son, also named William, who married Judith Moseley.

William Leak and Judith Moseley Leak had children, among them Walter Leak who was born at Buckingham, Va., Nov. 30, 1761. While a small boy his father moved to Anson Co., N.C., locating on Pee Dee River about 20 miles above Rockingham, N.C. Walter was a soldier in Revolutionary War. On Aug. 23, 1783, he married Hannah Pickett, who was born in Anson Co., N.C., July 20, 1766. Hannah Pickett was a class leader in the Methodist Church. The family owned the Hannah Pickett Leak Cotton Mills at Rockingham, N.C., one of, if not the first, cotton mill in North America. They had 5 children, 4 sons and a daughter. Francis Terry Leak, Sarah Child Leak, Walter Leak, Tom Leak, and James Pickett Leak. Hannah Pickett Leak died on Nov. 1, 1809. Walter Leak Sr. died in Anson Co., N.C., July 3, 1844. Both are buried in the Leak Cemetery in Rockingham, N.C.

Francis Terry Leak, our great grandfather, was the oldest child of Walter and Hannah Pickett Leak. He was born in Rockingham, N.C. on Aug. 28, 1802. [He married twice before marrying Martha Jane Malone (Locke), from which marriage the Warner Moore family line is descended.]

The family had previously moved from North Carolina to Tippah Co., Miss. and Col. Francis Terry Leak had large land holdings, was a slave owner, and very prominent politically having represented his district in the State House of Commons. He also had large land holdings in Arkansas. He kept such accurate and detailed records of his operations that because of their historical value in connection with Southern Plantation period of American history, the University of North Carolina has published his records in book form. [His second wife died in Miss. in 1838.]

Col. Francis Terry Leak married a third time, and this was to Martha Jane Malone Locke on June 30, 1840. She was a widow, Mrs. Hugh S. Locke, and had one child, a daughter at the time of her marriage. (This daughter later married a Mayo). Martha Jane Malone was born in Huntsville, Madison, Co., Ala., on Nov. 5, 1815. She was the daughter of George Booth Malone, a Methodist minister, and Margaret Norsworthy. Her father made a gift of $25,000 to a college at Taylor's Chapel, Tenn., the gift serving to make Col. Francis Terry Leak and his wife, Martha Jane, charter life members of the Foreign Missionary Society of the M.E. Church South. She was our great grandmother. To this marriage were born 10 children, namely:

Eliza Jane, Francis Terry, Jr. Martha Annah, Donna Malone, James Pickett, Mourning Ella, Henry Booth, Judie Fannie, Ada, and Robert M. Because of his prominence and financial aid contributed to the Confederacy, Col. Francis Terry Leak, Sr., had a price upon his head during the Civil War. To keep from being captured by Union forces, he had to leave his home in North Mississippi and go further south to stay behind the Confederate lines. He died near Selma, Ala. on Jan. 27, 1863.

His widow, Martha Jane Malone Leak, returned to the family home following the end of the Civil War and continued to live there until her death. She was an invalid from about 1870 on. She continued her interest in her church and her children until she died at Tippah Home, near Salem, Miss., on Dec. 12, 1875.

Eliza Jane Leak was born Mar. 26, 1842. In 1867 she married Col. Wm. M. Strickland of Holly Springs, Miss. She was his second wife. They had 5 children: Perle, who late in life married Gerard Badow, Frank, Jane, Jacob, and Claude. The Strickland Place, one of the ante bellum homes of Holly Springs, was a social and cultural center furnished with works of art and heirloom furniture, Entertained such famous Southern Statesmen as Jefferson Davis, L.Q.C. Lamar, and Edward Cary Walthall and was a home on display in Holly Springs Pilgrimage up to a few years ago. Is now torn down. Perle Strickland Badow died in 1948 at the ancestral home in Holly Springs.

Francis Terry Leak, Jr., was born July 1, 1843. He married Lula Earl Lumpkin, daughter of W.B. and J.J. Lumpkin on Feb. 25, 1874. There were 7 children: Lucille, W—, Gertrude, Lumpkin, Georgia, Francis Terry III, and Earl.

Martha Annah Leak was born July 31, 1845. She died April 17, 1847.

Donna Malone Leak was born Jan. 31, 1847. She married Robert Jesse Owen, son of Jesse and Caroline McDonald Owen. on Feb. 21, 1866. She died at Ashland, Miss. on Oct. 1, 1929. There were 10 children, namely: (1)Walter Terry born Feb. 26, 1867, died Mar. 2, 1867; (2) Olena, born Feb. 4, 1868, died Oct. 2 1870; (3)Bonnie Jean, born Oct. 13, 1869, died in 1931. DEATHS

Mary D. Leak, my beloved wife, died Tuesday night about 8 o'clock the 30th August 1831. She had professed the religion of Jesus Christ for about three years, and is now, I humbly believe, consumately happy at the right hand of God. God grant it and Grant O God, that her presence in heaven may constitute a pledge of the safe arrival there also of her poor, unworthy husband.

William P. Leak, my only son, died about 12 o'clock M. on Wednesday the 7th of September, 1831.

A pleasing thought, my dear little boy,
That soothes thy father's heart of pain,
Thy father's grief is thy mother's joy,
His transient loss is thy lasting gain.

Harriet M. Leak, my beloved wife, departed this life near Salem, Tippah County, Mississippi, Saturday morning, about half after 12 o'clock, the 23rd, June 1838.

Martha Annah Leak died about 3 o'clock Saturday morning, the 17th of April 1847.

Mary Louisa Leak died about 6 o'clock. Tuesday morning, the 25th July 1848. Hers was the happiest death I ever witnessed. The most enrapturing visions were constantly before her eyes for about 12 hours before her death. Her mother, and other friends, and last of all, her Saviour, appeared to her, filling her heart with such a transport of joy as rendered her at once the happiest and loveliest being I ever beheld. Her last words, uttered but a moment before her death, were, "All's bright. All's bright."

Henry Booth Leak died Thursday evening about 4 o'clock the 17th February 1853.

Francis Terry Leak, Sr., my beloved father, died Tuesday, about 7 AM the 27th of January 1863. A better and truer man never lived and at last may we, his children, and wife, all meet him in heaven to part no more. Amen.

Martha J. Leak, my beloved mother, departed this life near Salem, Sunday evening about 4 o'clock the 12th December 1875. God let me meet her.
